AFTER SUICIDE ATTEMPT IN U.S.

Doctor Questioned in Pachena Murder

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor who tried to kill himself in San Francisco, Tuesday was being questioned there today by two RCMP officers investigating the bizarre Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Kralt.

Kralt, 23-year-old caretaker of a deserted Bible camp four miles south of the isolated village of Bamfield on the Island's west coast was found shot to death Sunday. He had last been seen alive Oct. 23.

Port Alberni RCMP said this morning two officers had been sent to San Francisco "to talk with" Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in an apartment there under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10.

The RCMP sergeant in charge of the Kralt case said no charges had been brought against Stewart, and that RCMP just wanted "to ask him some questions."

U.S. Immigration authorities said Stewart and a woman companion, Maria Trigiani, 31, attempted a double-suicide Tuesday when inspectors Michael Harpold and Harry Hong sought to question them during an investigation to determine whether they were legally in the United States.

Stewart is a Canadian citizen while Miss Trigiani is an Italian national.

Immigration authorities said the couple was found in a gas-filled room after Harpold and Hong knocked at the door.

The inspectors said that when they identified themselves Stewart slammed and barricaded the door.

While trying to force the door the immigration men smelled gas, ran to an outside fire escape and climbed through a window.

They found Stewart and Miss Trigiani lying unconscious on the kitchen floor with the gas stove turned up full, the control handles removed and several empty phials lying on the floor.

The two were taken to San Francisco General Hospital but were reported as being in good condition and improving rapidly today.

The acting district director of U.S. Immigration at San Francisco, Gordon Davidson, said today his department still had not determined whether Stewart was lawfully in the country.

Port Alberni RCMP identified Stewart as a retired doctor who had been "a nomadic type" roaming from port to port on his 35-foot motor vessel Gypsy.

U.S. May Drop All Oil Quotas

OTTAWA (CP) — The hazy outlines of a broad oil-export agreement emerged Tuesday at the close of a joint United States-Canada ministerial conference.

The agreement has the immediate effect of clearing the way for all the crude oil Canada can export to the U.S. in 1971. This would likely mean a 100,000-barrel-a-day increase in piped oil exports from the present daily rate of about 750,000 barrels.

The additional oil exported would be worth about $100 million in a full year.

Officials of both countries then would try to work out an arrangement for future years that would provide "full and unimpeded" access of Canadian crude oil to U.S. markets.

As part of a longer-term agreement, Canada would have to maintain a reserve of excess oil to meet any emergency disruption in oil imports from outside North America.

WOULD SERVE EAST

The U.S. would meet any shortage in eastern Canada but those supplies would have to be replaced in the United States by oil from Western Canada.

A future agreement also depends on whether Canada is successful in overcoming U.S. reluctance to lift quotas against Canadian oil imports as long as Eastern Canada is dependent on what some consider uncertain overseas suppliers.

The U.S. has avoided heavy dependence on Canadian imports as long as there was a chance such supplies might be diverted to meet emergencies in Quebec or the Atlantic region.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, head of the Canadian delegation, and Secretary of State William Rogers, head of the U.S. delegation, both expressed confidence that the meeting had been a success

However, there was no indication of agreement on the issues of pollution, Canadian uranium exports or the U.S.-Canada automotive agreement.

REPORTS U.S. STAND

Mr. Sharp told a news conference the Americans had argued Canada should be prepared to give up safeguards contained in the auto pact because of substantial benefits already achieved.

U.S. officials said this would be one method by which Canada could assist the Americans in correcting a troublesome payments deficit.

Mr. Sharp said Canada replied that a current payments surplus now enjoyed in Canada was temporary. He said all safeguards could not be abandoned at once. But certain revisions in the 1965 trade pact might be possible.

Feasibility Studies Urged by Scientists

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A recommendation from the Science Council of Canada for the immediate launching of a federal-provincial feasibility study on offshore drilling was vigorously attacked today by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

There is "no way" oil drilling will be permitted in the Gulf of Georgia regardless of the findings from such a study, Davis said. (See also Page 14.)

The issue "is 100 per cent decided and even the oil companies are winding up their leases right now," he said when contacted in Winnipeg today.

Jurisdiction Issue Revived

The study recommendation was made in a report sent to Prime Minister Trudeau by Science Council chairman O. M. Solandt which also revived the controversial political question of continental shelf jurisdiction generally.

Davis was successful last spring in stopping B.C. Mines Minster Frank Richter's campaign to promote exploratory drilling by oil companies in the gulf.

There was a hint in the council report's approach that the federal Energy, Mines and Resources department may be giving moral support to the B.C. government to help it go ahead with promoting the oil exploration.

The report's recommendation to cabinet could precipitate the split and test of strength between EMR Minister J. J. Greene and Davis.

Davis is slated to annex Greene's Water Resources Branch when the impending department of environmental affairs and renewable resources is established in a few months.

The Science Council's report, entitled Canada, Science and the Ocean, was released at a press conference here this morning with Dr. J. M. Harrison, Greene's assistant deputy minister in charge of mines and the geo-sciences branch, explaining some of its points.

(His superior is EMR deputy minister Jack Austin, a widely known Vancouver mining executive whose unusual appointment to head the department last May was a storm in the Commons.

(Opposition members said they feared conflict of interest might occur and criticized Prime Minister Trudeau's assurances Austin would sever his commercial connections during the period he is in government service.)

$1 Billion Figure Suggested

Dr. Harrison, a council member, was chairman of a committee on marine matters which drew up the report saying there is "pressing" need for Canada to push offshore gas and oil explorations.

It said expenditure for such explorations could grow to "some $1 billion by 1980" and many times that amount if major discoveries are made.

"Optimal development of our offshore resources will not occur until the various internal and international jurisidictional disputes are settled," it said.

The Science Council "recommends that a concerted effort be made to resolve the jurisdictional difficulties with dispatch" because oil companies might switch attention to "other areas of the world where there are no jurisidictional disputes.

(The reference obviously was aimed at the federal-provincial argument over jurisdiction on the continental shelf.)

A 1967 Supreme Court of Canada reference said the federal government has explicit jurisdiction under the constitution, but Premier Bennett and his cabinet have refused to acknowledge the court's opinion.

The issue has lain dormant for a couple of years because the provincial government has not agreed to an Ottawa formula offering a split of offshore development revenues.)

Guinea Makes Plea for Aid After Raid by Mercenaries

DAKAR, Senegal (CP) — Guinea announced today that it was invaded again Tuesday night. President Sekour Toure called on "friendly countries" to send all the help they can as quickly as possible.

Radio Conakry, the West African nation's official radio station, referred to new "enemy incursions."

"Thanks to the vigilance of the people," the station said, "the attempts and evil intentions of the Portuguese imperialistic enemy were thrown back by Guinean patriots, the army and the glorious people of Guinea."

Toure has said the invading troops, which first landed on Guinea's shores early Sunday, are mercenaries hired by Portugal and attacking from Portuguese ships. Portugal has denied any involvement.

In Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, the secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity said today that Sudan, Egypt, Nigeria, Libya and Algeria have placed troops on the alert to go to Guinea if needed.

Zambian Vice-President Mainza Chona said in Addis Ababa that an emergency meeting of the OAU council of ministers will be held Dec. 9 to discuss the situation in Guinea.

Chona also appealed to members of the OAU, the non-aligned nations and the "progressive forces of the world" to extend all possible material, financial and military assistance to Guinea to repel the invaders, whom he alleged had the backing of not only Portugal but also "certain NATO powers."

CN Train Derailed

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — A train derailment just north of Dauphin early today tore up hundreds of yards of track, knocked 10 passenger cars off the track and sent an unidentified woman to hospital.

Guerrillas Clash With Jordan Army

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting broke out today between Jordanian army troops and Palestinian Arab guerrillas in northern Jordan.

Palestinians in Beirut, Lebanon, said the army opened fire on a hilltop position with mortars and machine-guns at 7:30 a.m., starting a battle that still was raging at noon.

WON'T OBEY

A Jordanian government source, however, insisted the troops had driven a group of guerrilla "mutineers," who wouldn't obey their commanders, from the village of Thahrat Asfour, on the road between Jerash and Irbid, about 35 miles north of Amman.

"Their control of the village," the informant said, "became a threat to traffic on the main Amman-Jerash-Irbid-Damascus road and the army had to force them out."

FLQ STRENGTH 'EXAGGERATED'

3,000 Armed Rebels in Quebec?

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette describes as "highly exaggerated" what he said was an implication by Jean Marchand that there may have been as many as 3,000 heavily-armed revolutionaries ready to fight for Quebec independence.

"There are maybe 100 or 125 active members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec in my opinion," the Quebec justice minister says in a Quebec City interview with the Star.

Without pinpointing when Mr. Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, made the implication, Mr. Choquette says:

"Mr. Marchand has his own way about him. His statement was highly exaggerated. There were far too many conflicting comments and opinions coming from Ottawa during the crisis."

In the interview, the Quebec minister adds:

"This movement (the FLQ) is not an overnight phenomenon. It has been building momentum for almost a decade, since 1963 . . . We were faced with a decision: Do we let it go by or do we make our stand?"

Mr. Choquette said much of the action by the provincial cabinet was based on what the future might hold, although the actual kidnappings of British envoy James Cross, still sought by police, and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, subsequently murdered, were enough for hard immediate action.

TWO GIRLS BEHIND BARS DURING BUILDING BLAZE

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Two inmates of a girls' training home were found locked behind bars in basement cells when firemen arrived to extinguish a minor blaze in the wooden building Tuesday night, fire Sgt. Gerald Noseworthy said today.

Four girls escaped during the confusion.

Stephen Neary, minister of social services and rehabilitation, said the two girls had been placed in the basement cells Tuesday "for their own safety and protection."

Mr. Sharp flies to Britain and Europe later this week to continue discussions begun here of the possible effects of an enlargement of the European Economic Community.

U.S. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel told reporters after the conference he strongly disagrees with statements by Canadian Energy Minister J. J. Greene, criticizing U.S. inaction on pollution in the Great Lakes. Mr. Sharp said he, too, felt the Americans were not doing enough to curb pollution.

HAVE MORE PROBLEMS

Mr. Hickel said the Americans have a great many more pollution problems and difficulties in fighting them than Canadians.

A joint communique, issued several hours after the conference ended and the U.S. delegates had left for Washington, said Canada pressed strongly for lifting of the U.S. partial embargo on imported uranium.

There was no indication that the Americans responded to the Canadian pressure for sales of uranium, now in oversupply in Canada.

The mineral's value as a source of electrical power still is questionable and its market value has slumped in recent years.

Mr. Sharp said United States officials agreed that U.S. restrictions on trade to countries such as Cuba are an "unnecessary provocation" to political opinion in Canada.

He said some progress may have been made toward persuading the U.S. that such restrictions were both ineffective and provocative.

The U.S. policy was a "convenient handle for economic nationalists" in Canada who oppose U.S. ownership of Canadian industries.

Shadow Mischief

. . . GULF OIL DRILLING

federal and provincial governments must act in concert to initiate thorough studies on the potential impact of particular industrial and resource developments on the local marine environment," the report continued.

"Oil exploration in the Strait of Georgia is a case in point.

"An immediate study is needed, as the basis for rational decision-making on the potential impact of this exploration and possible exploitation of petroleum resources on the marine environment, now highly valued for its scenic and recreational value as well as its sports and commercial fishery."

Asked if the council was aware of the Davis-Richter controversy last spring and subsequent federal announcements prohibiting oil explorations in the gulf, Dr. Harrison replied:

"The key point of this recommendation is the urgency for a study of the balance of resource use — what are the tradeoffs if there is oil development?

"Instead of talking about this thing in an emotionally-charged atmosphere, we're saying let's have a scientific study on it and find out just what are the problems."

Davis, in a telephone interview, retorted:

"We crossed that bridge as far as I'm concerned a year ago.

"There has been a cost-benefit study that shows categorically it's just hands down against oil development in the gulf.

"What benefits could there conceivably be of finding oil in the gulf where the geological structure is so minimal that no great pool of oil could be developed to change the economics of oil supply?

Potential Job Loss Large

"Such oil development would only provide a few highly-skilled jobs, but just think of all the jobs that might be lost or would not be developed in the fishery industry and the recreational industry which is ideal for that area.

"The author of that (Science Council) report just doesn't understand the cost-benefit concept.

"I happen to have written a book on cost-benefit determination and I've done my own calculations on the gulf situation, and there is absolutely no doubt at all that there is no economic case for oil exploration."

Davis said that the Science Council recommendation might be acceptable for other offshore areas "but we've decided we're not going to tolerate oil drilling in the Gulf of Georgia and even the oil companies are turning back and winding up their oil leases and permits now."

Davis also took exception to the report's reference to federal-provincial "shared responsibilities offshore."

"There is no provincial offshore reponsibility in the Gulf of Georgia," he snapped.

"Below the low water mark is entirely a Canadian responsibility, and is not shared with any province there (Georgia) or anywhere else."

Davis said the report indicated a strong EMR bias for vigorous development.

"It's one more reason for taking EMR out of renewable resources aspects and setting up a department to protect the environment.

"It's not conceivable that the department whose role is development of non-renewable resources like oil should also have authority over administration of renewable resources.

"There is a basic conflict here which is recognized by the decision to reorganize the departments, splitting renewable resources off from the non-renewable resources."

U.S. Senator Urges Oil Quota Lift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator William Proxmire has called for immediate action to ease a shortage of oil in the United States.

Proxmire, vice-chairman of the joint congressional economic committee, urged crude oil production control by the federal government be freed and import quotas be suspended.

His suggestions were made in letters today to Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the council of economic advisers, and George A. Lincoln, director of the office of emergency planning.

The lifting of crude oil controls would be "the first step in stemming inflationary oil price increases," Proxmire said.

The Wisconsin Democrat called for suspension of oil import quotas so pipelines from Canada, now running about 250,000 barrels a day short of capacity, could be used to "at most take up the shortfall in overseas supplies."

Company's $5M Assets To Be Shared

VANCOUVER (CP) — Investors in a bankrupt Commonwealth Group company will share with other creditors an estimated $5 million in assets on a settlement basis directed by Mr. Justice Gordon Rae Tuesday.

About 12,000 investment contract holders with the bankrupt Commonwealth Savings Plan will share on the basis of the amount of money invested plus interest to the date of bankruptcy in February, 1969.

The money is to come from sale of real estate held by CSP and mortgage investments, including holdings of associated companies in real estate in the Bahamas.

The judge's ruling was given in a 33-page judgment dealing with an application by Harold Sigurdson, trustee in bankruptcy for directions on three principal issues.

One of the issues was whether investment contract holders were to be treated as secured creditors.

. . . DOCTOR QUESTIONED

They said he had been in Victoria, and had been in "the Port Alberni area for a couple of months living on his boat."

The boat was also reported seen in the Bamfield area a week before Kralt disappeared.

The sergeant in charge of the Kralt case said the two RCMP investigators would be questioning Stewart in San Francisco today.

Stewart's boat, registered at Sausalito, Calif., was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia River off the Oregon coast Nov. 6, and he and Miss Trigiani were rescued by the U.S. Coast Guard.

DISTRESS SIGNALS

Coast Guard records show the Gypsy sent distress signals at 11:30 a.m. Nov. 5, reporting low fuel and high seas 200 miles north of San Francisco. The wreck was found later.

Police apparently believe there were two others aboard at the time of the wreck, but Coast Guard officials have no record of any other survivors.

Meanwhile, Port Alberni RCMP said they have no further statement to make regarding their investigation of Kralt's murder.

"Right now I have nothing to say until our two men return from San Francisco," the sergeant in charge of the case said.

He said Stewart was not under arrest as was erroneously stated earlier in a release from the U.S. immigration officials at San Francisco.

The sergeant also said it was not definitely known yet what kind of weapon was used to kill Kralt.

DIFFICULTY

"The body was so badly decomposed that even the coroner had difficulty."

"I have an opinion. But my opinion doesn't enter into it. I can't go into court with an opinion. What I'm looking for is facts."

Kralt, formerly a Duncan man, was found by two boys some 600 yards from the Shantyman's Christian Association lodge.

A search for the missing man began when residents of Bamfield who dropped in at the camp to see if Kralt was all right after he failed to make his customary daily appearances at the village.

They found his car gone, a partly eaten meal on the table and large amounts of blood on the floor.

FAVORITE SPOT

A favorite spot for campers and hikers in the summer months, Pachena Bay is a lonely, wind-swept place in the winter where Pacific gales and pounding surf drown out all other sounds.

Port Alberni RCMP earlier denied a rumor that the murder of Kralt involved drug smuggling.

They described as "garbage" a story that an American boat had been running drugs into the Pachena Bay area and that Kralt had been murdered when he stumbled over the illicit operation.

There are only two routes out of Bamfield other than by air or sea, and both are via some 80 miles of twisting gravel roads that are in poor condition at this time of the year.

Pachena Bay is just around the Cape Beale headland from Barkley Sound, which tapers into the long narrow Alberni Inlet, and runs to Port Alberni.

BOMB DAMAGES SOVIET OFFICES

NEW YORK (AP) — An explosion rocked a midtown Manhattan office building housing the offices of Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, and Intourist, the Soviet tourist agency, about 3:20 a.m. today, police said.

Police roped off the area in front of the three-storey building on East 49th Street, just off Fifth Avenue, and said they believed another live explosive device might still be in or near the building.

There were no immediate reports of injuries. Police said the building was unoccupied at the time of the blast.

An anonymous male caller telephoned The Associated Press some 35 minutes after the blast and said the offices had been blown up.

He also said: "Let the world know that while Jews are on trial in Russia the Soviet Union will be on trial. Never again."

The phrase "never again" has become associated with the Jewish Defence League, a militant Jewish organization.

Wild Shouting Adjourns Inquest

MONTREAL (CP) — Judge Jacques Trahan, presiding over a coroner's inquest into the death of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's former labor minister, said Tuesday he restrained himself in delaying sentence for two persons found in contempt.

Preferring to await a less "vexing moment," Judge Trahan set next Tuesday for continuing the inquest and sentencing the two for refusing to testify.

After trying for at least 20 minutes to get Clement Roy, an unemployed 22-year-old, to testify, Judge Trahan had to handle some wild histrionics from Lise Rose. Both were found in contempt.

Judge Trahan tried unsuccessfully to persuade Roy that his testimony might prove the innocence of another person or persons.

But Roy, calm throughout his brief appearance, replied that anything he said—even under court protection—could result in charges being laid against others.

NOTHING TO SAY

"I have nothing to say," he repeated several times.

Lise Rose, sister of two brothers wanted in the kidnapping Oct. 10 of Mr. Laporte, screamed before being dragged out that she had been stripped "stark naked" and beaten during interrogation by police.

Paul Rose is wanted for kidnapping both Mr. Laporte and, on Oct. 5, James (Jasper) Cross, British trade commissioner believed still alive and in the hands of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Jacques Rose is wanted for conspiracy in the kidnapping of Mr. Laporte, strangled Oct. 17.

PROTEST JAIL CONDITIONS

Lise Rose said that in protest of "inhuman conditions" at provincial police headquarters, where the inquest is being held and she is being detained, she refused to testify.

She said that all the women arrested in Montreal under the War Measures Act were taken to the Montreal women's jail except herself and Lise Balcer.

They were kept in provincial police cells and sometimes "almost froze" at night. They were both in the seventh day of a protest hunger strike.

Lise Balcer, 21, whose uncle Leon Balcer was a federal cabinet minister in the Diefenbaker administration, is charged with being or professing to be a member of the FLQ, as is Lise Rose.

Lise Balcer has testified that she lived for a time with Paul Rose in the bungalow south of Montreal where Mr. Laporte was believed to have been held for the last seven days of his life.

Rites Held For Arab War Veteran

Funeral services were held today for a First World War pilot who served in the Middle East during the Arab revolt.

Kenneth John Oldfield, 77, of 1079 Pentrelew Place, had served as a lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps, and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Order of Nahda, an Egyptian decoration.

Born in England, Oldfield came to Victoria after the war and farmed in Saanich, then was employed at the works department of what is now CFB Esquimalt.

He died Sunday, and is survived by his wife Elsa, two daughters, Mrs. S. R. Wallis of Victoria and Mrs. A. Boutell of Ottawa; four sisters, Mrs. S. M. Hobbs and Mrs. K. Edward of Victoria, and Miss G. Oldfield and Mrs. S. Abbott of England.

Funeral services were held at Chaplin's Funeral Chapel with Padre J. A. Roberts conducting the service.

Gordon Head Branch Approved by Board

The establishment of a branch library at Gordon Head was approved in principle by the Greater Victoria Public Library Tuesday.

Whether it will be in the new University Heights shopping centre will be discussed at the next meeting.

Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry met little support when he urged that space at the centre be leased for library use.

He met opposition because of the small amount of floor space available, 1,400 square feet. This is roughly the amount now being used for library services at the Town and Country shopping centre, already proving inadequate at peak periods.

One of the main reasons the board felt more study should be made was that the greater Victoria Centennial 71 committee has decided to make branch libraries a commemmorative project for Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich.

LOGICAL AREA

Col. A. O. Hood said: "Gordon Head is a logical area for a facility—I have no qualms about that at all — but it might be much better in the long run to go for construction in that area."

Acting chief librarian Mrs. Anne O'Brien noted that Gordon Head was a growing area and that its residents were "too sophisticated" to be satisfied with a 1,400 square foot library.

Financial committee chairman, Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen presented a provisional budget for 1971, which will be submitted to municipalities.

It showed estimated expenditures in 1971 of $838,830, compared to the 1970 figure of $675,408. Amount spent this year up to Oct. 31 was $414,151. Pollen emphasised that this was a provisional budget and could be changed.

Board chairman, Esquimalt Ald. Arthur Cuthbert reported that selection of candidates for the position of library director had been reduced to six.

Teacher Seeking Return as Trustee

Greater Victoria school trustee Allan McKinnon Tuesday announced he will seek re-election to the board Dec. 12.

McKinnon, 53, who lives at 1760 Rockland, said he was especially concerned with "the orderly and step-by-step introduction of educational television into the classroom."

He added that of prime importance in a public school system should be equal educational opportunity in all parts of the district.

McKinnon, an ex-army major, became the first teacher to sit as a trustee on the Greater Victoria board when he was elected two years ago.

He teaches school at Sangster Elementary school in the Sooke school district. He also has business interests in the city.

Researchers Discover Chemical That Prods Dormant Cancer Viruses

WASHINGTON (WP) — A chemical that seems to prod dormant leukemia viruses into virulent ones that turn cells cancerous has been discovered by a National Cancer Institute team.

The achievement — called "a major step towards solving the cancer mystery" by a medical magazine this week — could eventually provide a leukemia treatment if a way could be found to block the guilty chemical.

* * *

It might also lead to a new method of early diagnosis of leukemia while treatment is still possible. And it might provide a way to measure treatment effect.

Most important, it may be an essential clue to the way cancer grows.

What was discovered was an enzyme found in the lymphocytes (or colorless blood cells) of patients with acute lymphocytic leukemia (or blood cancer).

It was done in just six weeks of round-the-clock laboratory stints by Drs. Robert C. Gallo, Sue Yang and Robert C. Ting.

* * *

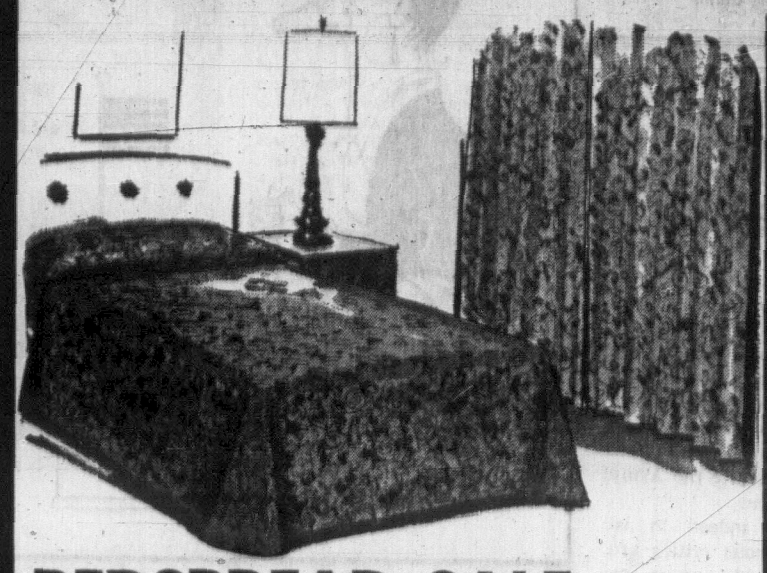

Gallo is on the staff of the cancer institute, on the National Institutes of Health campus at Bethesda. Drs. Yang and Ting are from Bionetics Research Laboratories in Kensington, Md., just outside Washington.

The NIH work began after the news this year that Drs. Howard Temin of the University of Wisconsin and David Baltimore of MIT had learned in animal cell cultures how a particular enzyme (called a polymerase) prodded RNA tumor viruses into manufacturing DNA copies.

Conversation Piece?

THE SUDDEN UNITED STATES bombing attack on North Vietnamese territory last Friday broke a six-months truce in this department of the war and raised speculation as to a possible major change of policy by American forces in Vietnam. But even more startling, and perhaps with wider implications for the future was the helicopter-borne commando raid which was designed to liberate United States prisoners believed held near Hanoi.

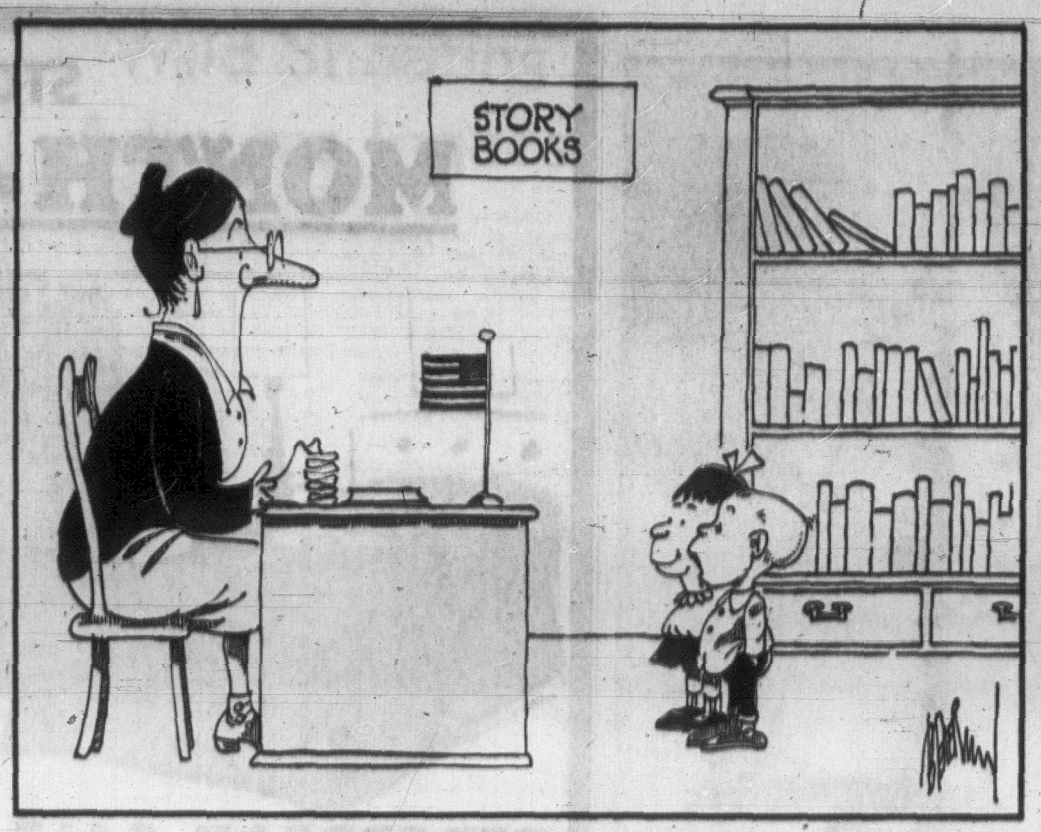

Although the camp proved empty, the raid itself was smartly carried out with only one minor casualty. The interesting question raised is whether this type of hit-and-run tactic deep inside enemy territory may be used again either for prisoner rescue or other purposes.

The raid was explained on the ground that there had been reports of mistreatment of American prisoners by the North Vietnamese, and such a reason obviously — and rightly — would incense the nation and arouse wide public support for the hawkish operation. The Hanoi threat that the Paris negotiations would be adversely affected carries little weight. For many months the Paris meetings have been no more than a play of diplomatic mumbo-jumbo, discredited by reason of their ineffectiveness and the obvious stalling tactics of the North Vietnamese. While it would be a pity to have the Paris confrontations broken off, the practical effect would be slight.

Attention therefore shifts to the battlefront. It is somewhat ironic that figures for a new low in the number of United States troops in Vietnam were announced almost as the weekend bombing was being carried out. That is not such a paradox as it may appear, for President Nixon's withdrawal program has always acknowledged that U.S. air power would remain at some strength in South Vietnam for an indefinite time despite the Army and Marine departures.

If the war is indeed to be escalated, as numerous critics are charging, this would appear to represent a great loss of confidence among Washington officialdom. The variety of reasons being given for the bombing attack suggests that none of them is the real one. It is now three weeks since the mid-term Congressional elections and the administration has little to fear, for the moment, from adverse political reaction at home. Only faulty intelligence regarding the continued use of the prisoner camp prevented what might have been a success that could have swept the United States with approval and admiration for an audacious feat.

There will be pressure in many quarters for a repeat performance, since Hanoi shows no indication of willingness to trade any numbers of captives. At any rate the raid has given the American public something to think about besides the shocking My Lai revelations, the reduced but steady attrition of American lives overseas, and the problems of disengaging from the Asian quicksand.

Bleak Prospects

Inadequate housing, no access and lack of game are factors causing privation and hardship to the Tall Grass Indian Band situated at Finlay Forks, B.C. Due to the construction of the Bennett Dam, the water in the man-made Williston Lake has risen to obliterate the previous homes of these people.

Makeshift houses are provided to serve as temporary shelter until the proposed transfer to land at Tutu Creek. However the water line has not yet been determined and the moving of these people is premature. They face the winter in houses that are merely shells.

The moose, upon which the Tall Grass people are normally dependent for food, have been driven from the area. Groceries are brought up the lake once or twice a week depending upon the weather and the whim of the storekeeper for Fort Ware. Road access has been cut off with consequent denial of medical and dental care. Winter has set in. The prospects are bleak.

At a recent meeting of the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society the membership declared its intention to protest the plight of these people and to demand of Federal and Provincial Governments immediate relief by way of access, relocation, and adequate housing and food supply.—Harriett E. A. Esselmont, President, B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society.

Anxious to Run Their Own Show

THE CANADIAN PRESS REport of the final meetings of British Columbia Indian Chiefs conference in Vancouver implies that the Indian organization wants Canada to pay the piper while the chiefs call the tune.

That, undoubtedly, is a misleading over-simplification of the situation confronting the Indians today. They show a healthy inclination to run their own show, even if they require funds from the Canadian taxpayer to carry out their intent. And since white authorities have been in charge for years without notable success in lifting the Indians out of their depressed state, the burgeoning confidence of the chiefs suggests an alternative in administration. Certainly in recent years some of their people have shown improving qualifications for the complex problem of administering Indian affairs. And in some ways they have a substantial advantage over non-Indian administrators. The chiefs should know, and should have the confidence of, their own people.

It is not unnatural that the recently concluded conference should have produced a consensus in favor of retaining rights and privileges as Indians at this stage. They are apparently not satisfied that transfer of jurisdiction to the provinces would provide adequate compensation for the benefits they now receive as Indians.

The chiefs are anxious to assume responsibility, they invite trust from their own people and, to non-Indians they present a hope that they will make good where attempts under white direction have failed.

A Matter of Definition

UNTIL VERY RECENTLY, Chinese in South Africa enjoyed special status and privileges. They were generally accepted as competitors in sporting events and allowed to travel in public vehicles reserved for whites; they were granted use of recreational facilities otherwise restricted to whites and encountered racial difficulties only occasionally, for the most part in the predominantly Afrikaans-speaking Orange Free State.

Nevertheless, under the laws of apartheid, they were legally classed as non-white — until passage of a recent edict. Now they enjoy legally a position equivalent to that of white people, and the South African minister of community development has warned that he wants "to make it clear to everybody that I will not take any notice of crackpot objectors and isolated troublemakers."

Circumstances surrounding the Chinese in South Africa are unusual. Their numbers are so small that they are not considered a potential source of trouble. The legal action, however, suggests an escape hatch from the prison of pigmentation. A small problem South Africa can bleach away. What can it do with a larger one?

White Is Beautiful

AS NEWS OF THREATENED drastic changes in hospital nurses' uniforms and caps gets around there will be a whispered, croaked, groaned and whimpered chorus of protest from thousands of beds of pain across the land.

A New York report quotes nurses as complaining that the traditional starched white skirts and caps fail to provide modern attractiveness, and suggests pant-suits, flowery head coverings and other innovations as alternatives. "You can't be happy working if you feel ugly," one girl says in defence of the changes.

The whole proposal, of course, is ridiculous, as any one of millions of bed patients or former patients could explain — at any rate, the male ones. No man, lying in illness or pain or in the quiet apprehensive pause before or after surgery, has failed to feel a warm surge of relief, gratitude, admiration as a female figure, garbed in the familiar starched uniform, appears at his bedside, with a helpful hand or an encouraging smile.

The whole vision is in itself a reassurance that everything is all right, that the situation is under control. And no woman's face under the perky little white cap has ever been anything less than beautiful.

BEHIND THE BOYISH GRIN

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Clear Prophecies of a Lonely Mike Pearson

IN the darkest days of the First World War, as we now learn for the first time, a young Canadian soldier, on overnight leave, reached London and found no one to welcome him. His name was unknown to any other person in that swarming city. And in a certain sense, though always living among the public crowds of politics and troops of private friends, that man has remained alone ever since then. The lonely youth's name was Lester Bowles Pearson.

Hutchison

But even on that brief holiday from war long ago he showed a flash of the boyish, gambling spirit which Canadians would come to know so well in later years — a sure grasp of the decisive, diplomatic moment. He disguised his terror, approached an elderly lady in the Picadilly tube station and asked if her companion, a beautiful young daughter, might dine with him and go to a theatre. So it was arranged, an innocent evening on the town, and as Mr. Pearson says, "It was one of the most courageous things I ever did. Nothing previously or subsequently done required half so much courage."

This rather pathetic but revealing little story appears in a new book of the ex-prime minister's memorabilia, Words and Occasions (The University of Toronto Press) which is not only fascinating but highly important as the study of a man and a nation.

Self-Revealing

Leaving the reviews to the reviewers, I venture to think that Mr. Pearson, perhaps unconsciously, has revealed himself here as never before. The biblical figure who wished that his enemy would write a book obviously knew what he was talking about. For no man can write a book about other men, or about the most public events, without also exposing his secret self.

Mr. Pearson's book is only a collection of his forgotten or unreported speeches, broadcasts and documents, a kind of preface to an autobiography now under way, eagerly awaited and sure to change many popular myths and so-called histories. Nevertheless, the collection, sparkling with wry humor and jokes against himself, yet colored with melancholy and sometimes almost despair — offers the first reliable sketch, if not the complete portrait, of the man and his times. And any reader will see at once that both man and times are quite different from the accepted version.

In that version a bouncy young bureaucrat somehow gets into politics and becomes prime minister, mainly because everyone likes his spontaneous grin, his bow tie, his rumpled clothes and his indiscreet banter — a preposterous caricature, of course, but largely self-made. Why is it that a close friend, reading the book, suddenly realizes that he has never known the other side of the man, the dark, prophetic side?

Without Illusion

The reason, I suspect is that in his youth, like all men, he did not yet know himself; in his middle age he saw humanity's prospects as too terrifying for mere utterance; and in his final years of public life he was content to do his best without illusion, without a trace of vanity (truly unique in politics) and without bitterness toward anyone, even the enemies, and especially the friends who so often betrayed him. Thus illusionless and inwardly alone, as in wartime London, he constructed the outward facade and painted the protective coloring to maintain at least a part of his natural serenity. His book shows that he succeeded.

Yet if it deepens the mystery and whets one's eagerness for the full autobiography, the record of Words and Occasions contains enough of both to satisy the most demanding reader. It must be read by any Canadian who seeks a sane perspective not only on the times of Mr. Pearson but on the times of Mr. Trudeau, too. I would guess that the contemporary prime minister will read the words and ponder the forgotten occasions with great profit. There is much to ponder, most of it directly relevant to Mr. Trudeau's current problems.

Taking, and over-condensing, a few examples, Mr. Pearson clearly foresaw, as early as January 1941, when he was little more than a chore boy in the Canadian high commissioner's office at London, the future frictions between Canada and the United States. In a speech at Nottingham, of all places, while bombs dropped upon the streets outside, he showed an understanding of the continental relationship which Mr. Trudeau hardly seems to have achieved even now.

Earlier than that, in 1934, as a raw recruit to the external affairs department, Mr. Pearson warned the government of R. B. Bennett that the world was drifting toward war and, amazingly, that the weapons of such a war would be nuclear.

In the Munich year of 1938 he said the same thing, with still more conviction, to the Mackenzie King government. It wouldn't listen but could never silence its obscure young servant.

Obligation to Help

After Mr. King failed and Louis St. Laurent succeeded in making him Canada's foreign minister, Mr. Pearson's maiden speech to Parliament raised the very question that seems to baffle the Trudeau government today. Launching his campaign for Canadian membership in NATO, he said the nation's supreme task was to help, as its means allowed, in the preservation of peace and he added: "How can we do this? By burying our heads in the snow and allowing others to make decisions without our participation which would bind us in spite of ourselves? There is no safety there."

No safety there. One is tempted to ask whether the Trudeau government has really learned that lesson when, in recurring cycle, NATO is threatened again by erosion and collapse.

Thus the other side of the statesman as it emerges in fleeting glimpses, but much of his book is laughter and the sunny side of Mike. The public doubtless will make mixed judgments on book and man, but no one can doubt that Mr. Pearson is easily the most readable and lively writer among all our politicians. If he laughs lest he should cry, the reader will laugh with him. It is a dull and unimaginative reader, all the same, who can fail to see a powerful intellect, a great heart and a certain humble, unflinching gallantry behind the laughter.

A NEW U.S. CHINA POLICY

By C. L. SULZBERGER

Time to Re-Examine Commitments

IT is obvious the United States is going to have to drop its antiquated dead-end China policy, and the first step must be acceptance of Peking's admission to the United Nations. Beyond that first step exists a morass of commitments made for various military, internal political and external diplomatic reasons over the past 21 years. These commitments must now be subjected to scrutiny by Congressional committees in order to see how the United States may best extricate itself from outmoded pledges and adapt itself to new requirements.

Sulzberger

Thirteen years ago (Oct. 16, 1957) George Yeh, that renowned oriental gourment-intellectual who was then Chiang Kai-shek's Foreign Minister in Taipei, told me there existed a secret but binding commitment between Chiang's Government and that of the United States specifically tying the fate of Taiwan to that of Okinawa and therefore of Japan.

Yeh told me he had exchanged secret letters with John Foster Dulles, U.S. Secretary of State, eight days after the signing of a mutual security treaty between Taipei and Washington on Dec. 2, 1954. Only the "substance" of this exchange had been made public, Yeh said.

Nevertheless, he added, the basic purport of the correspondence pledged Chiang not to invade mainland China without American permission but — and this was not published — the United States likewise pledged that no substantial reduction would be made in American military forces stationed on Okinawa without first consulting Chiang.

Okinawa, of course, is the principal geographical bone of contention between Washington and Tokyo. It is acknowledged by the U.S. to be Japanese territory but its administration still — even today — remains in American hands. A gradual regularization of this anomalous position has been formally agreed on and there has already been some reduction in U.S. military strength on the strategically important island.

Taipei Impact

The implication of the Yeh-Dulles correspondence, at least as reported by Yeh, would seem to hint that Taipei has at least an inferential impact upon the U.S.'s entire Japanese policy, which is so closely tied to the Okinawa question.

Furthermore, it clearly relates to the entire U.S. strategic stance in the Pacific because of Okinawa's special importance and although this may be questioned in coming months—Taiwan's.

Thorough examination of the tangle of commitments existing among Washington, Taipei and Tokyo will probably show there is nothing in the least difficult to straighten out under the altered circumstances of today but Peking will undoubtedly attach importance to the fact that Tokyo is involved at all.

U.S. Less Frightening

For, although the U.S. is today considered an ugly short-range problem for China (if less frightening than the Soviet Union), Japan, the principal American trading partner and ally, is increasingly held to be a major long-range problem by the Chinese Foreign Ministry.

This is rarely if ever suggested by official statements in Peking, and Tokyo goes out of its way to appear as friendly to China as may be consonant with Japan's primordial U.S. attachments.

Nevertheless, there is more than a slight suggestion that the Chinese are currently worried not only by present bonds between Washington and Tokyo, in which Washington so obviously carries the weight, but also by future close Japanese-American bonds in which Tokyo's weight may become more significant.

The shadow of this relationship, for Peking, is still more apparent than the substance. But there seems to be a Chinese suspicion that the problem of adjusting relationships to Taiwan — an island so urgently claimed by Peking — may slowly become more Sino-Japanese than Sino-American as it is today.

Exhumation Due

It is time for the U.S. to exhume the body of commitments affecting relationships with China, starting with the period immediately following World War II, when Chiang was fighting to establish control, and continuing into the period following his defeat in 1949 and his removal to Taiwan.

Until these undertakings are fully known — including their all-important implications vis-a-vis Japan — it will be impossible to recast U.S. China policy, to contemplate how this may affect Tokyo and also how it may affect Tokyo's view of Washington.

A cupboard of documents accumulated over more than a quarter of a century now demands examination. Only against the valid promises contained in that collection may one fairly inaugurate a new China policy.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of November 25, 1910.

The censorship of theatres and moving picture shows in the interests of the children of Vancouver was a fruitful source of discussion at the meeting of the city council . . . An alderman remarked that picture shows were sometimed bitterly attacked. They should be made very entertaining and educative to the public. They used to have shows constantly exhibiting pictures of crime and these excited the minds of the young and produced criminals.

There's Catch In the Rules

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

ESSONDALE — There is a stranger in the mirror, someone you have never seen before. Someone as completely unknown to you, as different from you and separate from you as the man passing on the street.

You were washing your face in the sink. You looked up, expecting to see yourself reflected in the glass, but no, instead there's that stranger. With a cruel mouth. A crazy-looking guy. He's mocking you. He looks like he hates you.

Your nervous system reacts like a window hit by a stone. It starts to shatter.

Schizophrenia.

Arriving at Riverview Hospital, you are assigned to the Crease Unit, and given some drugs to dull your horror and fear.

You are classified as being at Level One.

That means that you can wear only pyjamas and must eat all your meals in the ward.

However, if you attend ward meetings, prove "co-operative in treatment programs," maintain "appropriate personal appearance," and keep a "tidy bed area," you may be promoted to Level Two.

All the doubts that used to prowl along the edges of your mind have moved right in. They straddle all your thoughts. Not shadows any more. Certainties. You are useless. You know it now. You are incompetent. You are a coward. You are impotent, ugly, disgusting.

Vaguely, you recall being confident, certain, sure of yourself, but not any more. That confidence was an illusion. You were only kidding yourself. What a joke.

You look out the window and nothing you see stirs any feeling or urges. Nothing excites you. Nothing appeals to you.

Third of Series

You sit or lie or stand motionless. There is nothing making you do things any more. The engines have stopped working.

Alive. But not really alive. Your body is alive. But inside you're dead. Empty.

You want to kill off your body as well, just to get relief from the horror of being a corpse dragged around by muscles that won't stop their meaningless coiling and uncoiling.

Acute depression.

Having attained Level Two at Crease Unit, you may wear your own clothes and go to the dining room to eat, although only in the company of other patients who have reached, by good behavior, a higher "level of responsibility."

Then, IF you show that you are "able to socialize with others," IF you continue to participate in meetings, and IF you "maintain appearance" . . .

Well then, you might get to go out on the grounds. In the company of others who have behaved so well they've got to an even higher level.

You look at the ceiling and it explodes. The faces of demons and monsters, things you have no words for, shapes that change the instant you look at them. They spread out like fans, like flames. Your dog comes up to you and you reach for him — but jerk your hand away because you see in his eyes that he wants to eat you alive.

Psychotic.

If at Level Three of Responsibility, you show "increasing involvement with others," IF you improve your appearance even more and make your bed area even tidier, and IF you are careful to keep "reasonable sleeping habits" . . .

You will actually be allowed out on the grounds by yourself.

Someone is out to get you. Hurt you. Maybe even kill you. Your mind says no, that's crazy. But your nerves. Your nerves are singing with tension, your heart works like a machinegun, your palms are sweaty. Every noise, no matter how small, how distant, crashes into your head, landing every time on a bruise, setting off a jangling crackling alarm.

Paranoia.

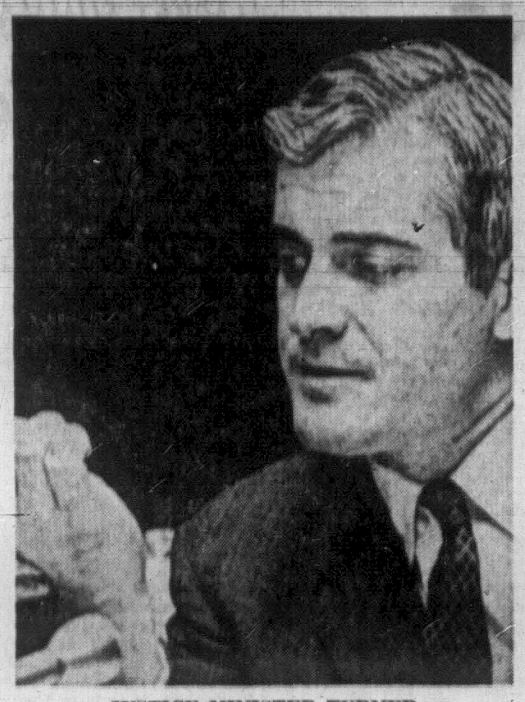

There are two more levels after Level Four of Responsibility. Each one gives you more little privileges. Eventually, if you are careful and obedient all along the line, very neat, very tidy, very keen, you will get out of Riverview.

But there's a catch.

If at any point you break the rules . . .

You get busted down to a lower level, with your hard-won privileges stripped away.

JUSTICE MINISTER TURNER

Truth Casualty in House Debate

By JAMES EAYRS

(Professor of International Relations at the University of Toronto.)

The Parliament of Canada is seldom described as a chapel of the intellect. "Our party struggles," writes the historian Frank Underhill, "have never been raised to the higher intellectual plane at which they become of universal interest by the presence of a Canadian Jefferson and a Canadian Hamilton in opposing parties."

Sadly true. Yet, within the limits imposed by the material — you can't make a Jefferson out of most honorable members any more than a Jefferson Airplane out of Don Messer and his Islanders — our parliamentarians are striving to attain the level of debate demanded by a social and constitutional crisis of unprecedented gravity — a crisis for which, as the minister of justice acknowledged in the House, "Canadians were philosophically unprepared."

•

In this great debate, John Turner has demonstrated unpreparedness of a different kind. His speech on Nov. 4, moving "that Bill C-181, to provide temporary emergency powers for the preservation of public order in Canada, be read the second time," misleads Parliament and the people.

To support the government's contention that, appearances to the contrary, resort to emergency powers saved Quebec from revolution, Mr. Turner and his assistants dug back in their case books.

There they uncovered a conveniently helpful opinion by a forgotten associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Justice Edward T. Sanford (raised for the occasion to the rank of chief justice, a post he never occupied) is quoted in Turner's speech as follows: "A single revolutionary spark may kindle a fire that, smouldering for a time, may burst into a sweeping and destructive conflagration . . . (The State) cannot reasonably be required to defer the adoption of measures for its own peace and safety until the revolutionary utterances lead to actual disturbances of the public peace or imminent and immediate danger of its own destruction; but it may, in the exercise of its judgment, suppress the threatened danger in its incipiency."

Aware that Edward T. Sanford, even when improperly attired in the robes of a chief justice, might not be a sufficiently authoritative name to enlist in the service of his argument, Mr. Turner stated that Sanford's opinion was "approved by Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes."

In war, truth is the first casualty; in our war against terrorism, truth is taking quite a beating. John Turner would have us believe that a great liberal jurist supported the principle of his Public Order Act.

But Mr. Justice Holmes did not approve of Sanford's opinion in the case of Gitlow vs. New York. Mr. Justice Holmes dissented from that opinion — dissented so forcefully and so memorably that (as Felix Frankfurter later observed) "the dissent in Gitlow has been treated with the respect usually accorded to a decision." But not by our minister of justice.

•

Rather than pervert the Gitlow case, Mr. Turner would do better to apply it. Since he won't, I will.

The defendant Gitlow, with three other accused, had been charged during the early 1920s with violating the New York Criminal Anarchy Act passed in 1902 in the panic that followed the assassination of President McKinley.

The act defined criminal anarchy as the "doctrine that organized government should be overthrown by force of violence . . . or any unlawful means," and made the advocacy of such doctrine, by print or word of mouth, a felonious offence.

•

Gitlow's felony consisted in writing and printing The Left Wing Manifesto, a pamphlet reaching its most seditious pitch by suggesting that the Winnipeg General Strike with other urban disorders of the time were evidence that "the mass struggle of the proletariat is coming into being" and by urging its readers to hold themselves in readiness for this great event.

Gitlow's behavior, in Mr. Justice Holmes' opinion, did not warrant his being sent to jail. It was not just that The Left Wing Manifesto "had no chance of starting a present conflagration." It was that free speech required that advocates of proletarian revolution be allowed to advocate proletarian revolution.

"Every idea is an incitement," the celebrated dissent declares. "It offers itself for belief, and if believed it is acted on unless some other belief outweighs it . . . The only difference between the expression of an opinion and an incitement in the narrower sense is the speaker's enthusiasm for the result. Eloquence may set fire to reason . . . If in the long run the beliefs expressed in proletarian dictatorship are destined to be accepted by the dominant forces of the community, the only meaning of free speech is that they should be given their chance and have their way."

•

Such is the opinion of the authority whom our minister of justice cites as supporting the principle of his restrictions upon freedom of speech and expression in Canada.

After Happy Elementary Days, The Let-Down of High School

The most valuable results of research do not always lie in what the researchers set out to discover, but in some almost accidental by-product of their studies. It is possible that this is true of studies made by Helen M. Woodliffe and Jwalla P. Somwaru of bright children who had attended Etobicoke advancements classes during elementary school.

What the two educators wished to discover was the effect which advancement classes had on the future studies of the children. Did they do better work as a result of these classes — making allowance for their greater intelligence — than children who attended ordinary classes?

The GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The answer seemed to be yes, at least in certain areas. But another discovery should grab as much — or possibly more — attention from educators, trustees and parents. The children claimed that they were turned on by the advancement classes and turned off by secondary school.

Rigid Methods

In their 1968 report the two researchers put it this way: "When they (the students) make comparisons with the approaches to which they were accustomed at the elementary level, they regret that methods seem rigid, that individuality is rarely encouraged, and interest in learning is less evident among their peers in high school."

In their 1970 report they put it this way: "High school was said to be most unsatisfactory, repetitious and dull by a quarter of the population . . . It was frequently stated that there was a difference between advancement class and Grade 9, with a large number preferring the advancement classes over secondary school. Students stated their approval of the more informal, relaxed atmosphere of the advancement class and of methods which allowed individuality, development of confidence and a sense of responsibility . . . they had been taught to work independently and to prepare assignments. They felt that this training would be of more use in university than in secondary school."

This is calm research language. Dr. Woodliffe, speaking at the weekend, put it more forthrightly. She said that when students were questioned about secondary school programs in Grade 10, their "comments were devastating."

Find It Dull

She was supported in this view by a panel of gifted students themselves. Most found high school dull and unsatisfactory. It should be borne in mind, too, that the study found that 'in most cases attitudes of staff members (teachers) to former advancement class pupils was favorable". That is, they were better received by their teachers than ordinary students, and they were — probably — more articulate than ordinary students.

What must be at least suspected is that they speak for ordinary students as well. That many children enjoy elementary school, find it interesting and stimulating, and suffer a serious let-down when they move into high school. Certainly it is a situation far too generally known to parents to be dismissed.

But what makes it so?

There could be many factors. Elementary school is severed from high school, as it ought not to be. The child advances through elementary school to a peak; he leaves it as a senior, a top dog; only in high school to be plunged down to the bottom again. He goes from a relatively small school where he knows most of the teachers and students to a large institution where he knows few and would be extraordinary if he did not feel lost.

Myriad of Rules

The size of the thing makes regimentation inescapable. He must obey a myriad of rules which often seem — and sometimes are — unreasonable. He is more distant from his teachers, often separated from the friends he has grown up with.

This all happens to him at a time, too, when he is undergoing deep physical and emotional change.

One purpose of the studies was to determine if the methods used in the advancement classes could be advantageously adopted in ordinary classes. Many students, according to the reports, "mentioned the fact that the classes encouraged individual effort, self-discipline, responsibility and that lessons were more challenging as students learned how to get the most out of studies through research."

If such methods, such a climate, could improve the elementary schools, how much more valuable would they be in the high schools!

Our high schools have cost much money. They are architecturally splendid, full of expensive equipment, replete with swimming pools, libraries, gymnasiums, staffed by people who think they are worth a minimum of $8,100 and a maximum of $17,100.

Yet if their net effect is to bore children, to kill in them the spark of curiosity, to make them wish they were almost anywhere else, then they are a very costly failure.

Another Look at De Senectute

By ART STOTT

Most of my Walter Mitty postures never get past my own imagination. I dream up a sequence that gives me imposing stature, savor it for all it's worth and then just file it away as a pleasant memory. No one knows about it. It's my own personal exercise in ego flattery.

There was an occasion, however, when I acted out the theme — fortunately in the privacy of my own living room, into which nobody intruded.

The effort required a little planning. My purpose was to assume the role of a quiet, well-endowed classical scholar—a sort of Professor Higgins with a particular bent for Latin. I had borrowed an excellent translation of Cicero's De Senectute from the library and found, to my delight, that the translation was accompanied by the original Latin text.

★ ★ ★

I fed my open fire and the alder glowed beautifully. I donned a dressing gown that semed to me to lend a certain insouciant elegance to the tableau, poured a splash or two of good brandy into a snifter, lit a 15-cent cigar and settled in my easy chair to my reading.

In retrospect the operation seems to have been the most impressive bit of hamming I have ever done. I'd read a few lines of the translation and then leaf back to the original, checking the translation not only for accuracy but also for cadence and metre. I'd sip elegantly from the snifter cradled in my hand and puff leisurely at the cigar.

★ ★ ★

The performance was extremely good for an appreciative audience of one—me.

The show ended in a climax of raucous laughter—my own. Even I am not sufficient of a ham to carry on a charade like that indefinitely. How phoney, I asked myself between paroxysms, can you get?

So the experiment in savoring the delights of classical scholarship under the most appropriate of circumstances and from the pages of one of antiquity's great writers ended in complete hilarity.

It also left me with a disorganized impression of the comforts and compensations of advancing years, which was a serious loss.

In recent days, however, my spirits have been revived by a factual story indicating a wholesome regard for the wisdom that can come occasionally with age. I have been reading about Dr. Paul Weiss, who combines a healthy concern for physical fitness with impressive studies and discourses as a professor of philosophy and who—is 69 years old.

Dr. Weiss is suing Fordham University for $1 million. Fordham allegedly offered him the Albert Schweitzer Chair for 1971 and then withdrew the offer when the State of New York, which finances the chair, allegedly objected that Dr. Weiss was too old.

Whether or not Dr. Weiss wins a million-dollar judgment from the university is of little consequence to me. He has, however, loosed a stream of thought that might be profitable to the society of our times and is definitely encouraging to those moving gently beyond middle age. Some interesting questions have been raised, significantly one asking how old is a philosopher before he becomes overaged.

★ ★ ★

Schweitzer, it has been pointed out, lived to be 90 and was reasonably useful and coherent in the last score of years. Most authorities believe Plato lasted on to 80, delivering some of his best dialogues in his later years. Socrates was reportedly about 69—and a pretty good defence lawyer—before he was sandbagged with a Hellenic mickey finn.

The list goes on. Immanuel Kant, Alfred North Whitehead and George Santayana worked on into their eighties. Arthur Schopenhauer and John Locke were functional in their seventies.

★ ★ ★

The famous names mentioned in The Christian Science Monitor account of the Weiss case lends significance to the importance of the elderly in eras during which youth had to be served—just as it demands to be served today.

The report almost inspires me to look again at Cicero's piece regarding old age—without the folderol of my Walter Mitty production. Just possibly the plunge into senility doesn't occur suddenly with the thirtieth birthday.

More power to Dr. Weiss and a gesture which could help to restore the confidence of people beyond the first blush of youth. To me it makes better music than a lot I hear these days to the accompaniment of amplified guitars from self-appointed philosophical folksingers.

DAVID MOTORS LTD

Electrohome

Record sales totalling $33.66 million, up 8.5 per cent from $31 million a year ago, are reported by Electrohome Ltd. for the nine months ended Sept. 30.

After tax net profit amounted to $678,932 ($1.27 a share) vs. $1.28 million ($2.54), which was attributed to some facilities operating at less than capacity, general economic conditions and compliance with the Prices and Incomes Commission guidelines.

But the third quarter was better than the second and the outlook for 1970 is promising, though earnings will be down, the company said.

CN Bank

Banque Canadienne Nationale reports net earnings of $6.6 million or $1.11 a share for the year ended Oct. 31, up from $5.7 million or 96 cents in the previous year.

Assets at the year-end totalled $1.9 billion compared with $1.67 billion at the same time last year, while deposits amounted to $1.7 billion compared with $1.5 billion.

Humble Oil

Humble Oil and Refining Co. will spend 45 days evaluating Superior Valley holdings of Texacal Resources Ltd., of Vancouver, for which it is paying the Vancouver-based company $25,000.

At the end of the period, terminating Dec. 24, Humble may pay another $25,000 if it decides to develop the claims, which are a copper-molybdenum prospect.

If the California property is brought to production within five years, Humble will pay Texacal 10 per cent of smelter returns for five years, or $1.25 million — whichever is greater.

Texacal also has Babine Lake copper property it wishes to examine in detail.

Black Giant

Diamond drilling of two eastern Canadian properties is being undertaken by Black Giant Mines Ltd., of Vancouver. They are a nickel-copper holding at Bethoulat Lake, Que., a joint venture with Canex Aerial Exploration at Sturgeon Lake, Ont.

A winter camp is being prepared for the former, following a 5,000-foot drilling contract agreement. Drilling at the Ontario property will start after freezeup.

Craigmont

Drilling of its 35 claims located about 2½ miles southwest of Craigmont Mines Merrit property was to be under way this month, reports Rodstrom Yellowknife Mines Ltd., which has trench samples showing good values in copper.

Underlying formations are favorable to mineralization, according to a consultant, and a diamond drilling program on the trenches is recommended, along with geological mapping and outcrop surveying.

Western Realty

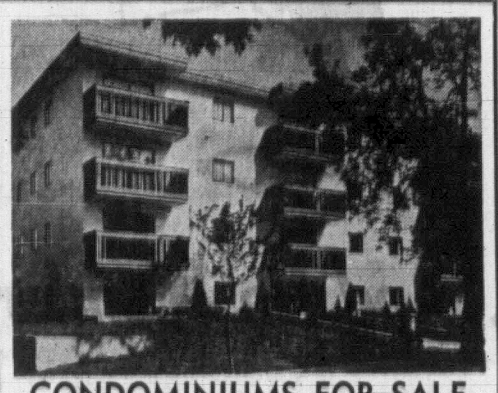

Western Realty Projects Ltd. will build a $14 million two-level regional shopping centre-mall at Edmonton, to be completed in 1972. It will be the second large centre in Edmonton where Western has a controlling interest.

Hudson's Bay Co. and a second major department store will have retail businesses in the project that will also include a supermarket, two theatres, 75 smaller shops and boutiques and parking for 2,500 cars.

Kalco Valley

A start was to be made this month on 14 percussion drill holes on property held by Kalco Calley Mines Ltd. 12 miles north of Princeton, which Amax Exploration Inc. (subsidiary of American Metal Climax) has agreed to explore.

Work to date has outlined a zinc anomaly superimposed by a copper zone and a molybdenum zone. Amax can earn 70 per cent of the profits by putting the property into production by July 1979. A total $350,000 must be spent by July 1, 1975.

NEW B.C. PULP PLANT TO START PRODUCTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new refiner groundwood pulp plant that has been built at Mackenzie, 100 miles north of Prince George, is expected to be in production in December, says Robert J. Cattermole, president of Finlay Forest Industries Ltd.

This is part of the pulp mill that will produce 160 tons a day in its first phase. The pulp will be shipped from Vancouver to Japan for inclusion in newsprint and fine papers manufactured there.

The entire pulp production will be taken by the Japanese companies that are partners in the Finlay Forest Industries development at Mackenzie.

Borrowing Rate Cut by GMAC

General Motors Acceptance Corp. Tuesday dropped its short-term borrowing rate to 5 per cent, the first of the commercial money dealers to go that low since prime interest rates began to fall.

The GMAC 30-89-day rate previously had been 5¼ per cent. At the same time the company reduced the rate on 90-179-day paper from 5⅝ per cent to 5⅝ per cent, and on 180-365-day notes from 5⅞ to 5½ per cent.

With the decline in bank rates more interest is being shown in fixed income securities, reflected in substantially stronger bond market prices in the past two weeks.

The climate has coincided with decisions by major corporations to offer numerous new debenture issues, some of which are being bid to a premium, while existing medium term issues nearing their redemption dates are up anywhere from a fraction of a point to several points.

New issues continue to appear, one of the latest from Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., offering at par 20-year bonds worth $18 million, dated Dec. 1 and bearing interest at 9¼ per cent, which was offered Tuesday.

Exchanges Merger Talk On Wall St.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A merger of the New York and American Stock Exchanges — sought by many brokerage firms as a step that could save millions of dollars in "double dues and duplicate staffs," — may be accomplished "sooner rather than later."

This is the opinion of one Wall Street spokesman, echoed throughout the financial community.

"It's not a new idea, we're more serious about it now. I think the time isn't too far off when we will have one big national stock exchange," said an official of one big brokerage house.

A spokesman for another large firm said "it has to come to pass . . . a lot of people have it in mind. Times are tough in the securities business and a lot of us are looking hard at those double dues we are paying for two big exchange staffs and duplicate services."

While spokesmen for most firms preferred to speak off the record for one reason or another, including the fact some of their officers also are officials of the Big Board or the Amex, James W. Davant, managing partner, Paine, Webber, Jackson and Curtis came out in favor of a merger.

Davant told a news conference, called on to announce that the 68-branch firm was going to incorporate Dec. 11, that the Big Board and the Amex could be merged in about a year "if everybody wants to do it."

After that, Davant said, the other echanges could be brought in over a period of years.

B.C. Bank Revenue Jumps

VANCOUVER (CP) —The Bank of British Columbia announced greatly increased results Tuesday in all phases of its operations for the year ended Oct. 31.

The biggest jump over last year was taken by the balance of revenue, which rocketed 330 per cent to $523,00.

Balance of profits was up 205 per cent to $157,300 for the 2½-year-old bank. Undivided profits at the end of the year were up to $38,300 from $30,900.

Total revenue more than doubled, to $7.4 million. Total assets climbed 64 per cent to $121.3 million, deposits were up almost 80 per cent to $107.1 million and loans were up 79 per cent to $68.3 million.

Shareholders' equity rose slightly to $13.17 million from $12.85 million. Securities held rose 5 per cent to $35.1 million.

Bank officials predicted that by 1980 there will be Bank of B.C. branches in major cities across Canada.

"Once we have 25 to 30 branches in the province, then we'll be ready to expand," said Albert Hall, chairman of the board and president.

Fred Vanstone, assistant to the president, said he expected the bank would be in a position to expand out of B.C. in two or three years "if we continue at our present rate of growth."

will hold a public meeting

AMC Closes Plant At Brampton

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — American Motors Canada Ltd. closed its Brampton plant —where Gremlins and Hornets are assembled—this week because it has been overproducing.

Part of the reason, said L. G. Rice, the president and general manager, is that the sub-compact Gremlin has not been selling as well as anticipated.

"We're selling a richer mix of cars," Mr. Rice said. Sales of the compact Hornet and medium-priced cars have been better than expected, he said.

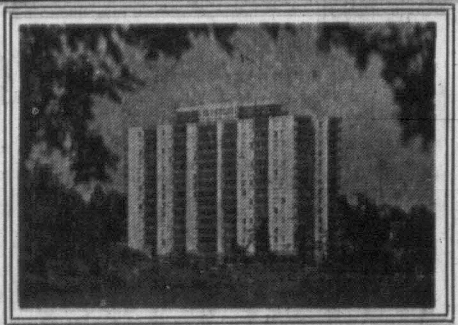

Gremlins also are assembled at a plant at Kenosha, Wis., and it too is shut down this week. This is the second one-week shutdown for the Brampton plant.

Another reason for the closures was a slowdown plant of a supplier of transmissions for the American Motors cars, Mr. Rice said.

The Brampton plant assembles about 60,000 cars a year. Total American Motors sales in Canada are between 20,000 and 22,500 cars a year.

Hara-Kiri Rites End Protest

TOKYO (Reuter) — Yukio Mishima, Japan's most famous author, today disemboweled himself and was then beheaded in a samurai warrior-style protest against the disappearance of Japan's former military might.

The 45-year-old novelist-playwright and one of his followers in his right-wing patriotic organization both died by the sword in the ritualistic hara-kiri suicide after attacking an army headquarters here.

Mishima and four members of his Association of Shields stormed into the office of the commanding general, held him captive at swordpoint and forced more than 2,000 stunned soldiers to listen to a 10-minute harangue from the author about corruption in Japan.

From a second-floor balcony, Mishima, dressed in the khaki military-style uniform of his association, urged the troops to join with him in creating a new constitution that would restore Japan's former military greatness.

MAKE SOLDIERS LISTEN

The invaders demanded that the soldiers listen to the speech or Lt-Gen. Kanetosihi Masuda would be killed.

"Long live the emperor!" he cried to officers and men in a courtyard below. Then he declared: "We will take our life to protest Japan's constitution, which prohibits Japan's rearmament."

After delivering his speech, the author barricaded himself and the four followers in Masuda's office. As the stunned general looked on, Mishima seated himself and began the ancient hara-kiri rite.

He drew a long samurai sword, bared his abdomen and drew the sword across it, drawing blood. Then, as the blood flowed, he bowed his head and let Masukazu Morita, his 25-year-old protege, plunge a shorter sword into his neck. Another aide cut off the writer's head with a third sword.

Morita then plunged a sword into his own abdomen and let one of his comrades decapitate him.

About 250 riot police who burst into the room in a rescue attempt found the two headless bodies on the floor. The heads were nearby, with white cotton hachimaki (headbands), also part of the samurai tradition.

The remaining three invaders were hustled away by police, who said later they would be held on suspicion of murder, inflicting injuries, intimadition, obstruction of official duties and illegally entering the general's office.

Observers noted similarities between today's incident and the coup d'etat attempts by Japanese right-wing militarists in the 1930s.

The general was rescued unharmed, but eight soldiers who tried to stop the attack received slash wounds.

SPECTACULAR SUICIDE by brilliant Japanese author Yukio Mishima today ended a demonstration in an army camp to protest that nation's constitution, which prohibits any buildup of military strength. (AP Wirephoto.)

Pope to Visit China Doorstep

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A visit to the doorstep of China will be one of the most interesting aspects of Pope Paul's trip to the Far East.

Next week, en route from Indonesia to Ceylon, the Pope will pause three hours at Hong Kong for an outdoor mass before tens of thousands of persons.

Hong Kong has more Chinese who are Roman Catholics than any other city in the world. As residents of a British Crown colony they are free to worship as they please.

In mainland China, adjoining Hong Kong, the Roman Catholic Church is suppressed. The church counted 3.2 million communicants there when the Communists took over in 1949. Many of them have been subjected to persecution, and the Vatican has little information on how many survive in their faith.

China has been on Pope Paul's mind for many years. In 1967 during a solemn ceremony he pleaded with Peking to resume contacts. He said he would never give up hope of sending priests back to China.

Pope Paul repeatedly has advocated admission of China to the United Nations.

Last August the Chinese "unexpectedly," as the Pope said, released Bishop James E. Walsh after 12 years of imprisonment. Pope Paul said he hoped this "could be a sign of better days for religious freedom in that country."

SECURITY REASONS CITED

POW Rescue Bid Details Remain Scant

The following look into the U.S. attempt to rescue American prisoners-of-war was written by John Lengel, who spent 2½ years as Associated Press correspondent in South Vietnam.

By JOHN LENGEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon Tuesday added only tantalizing shreds of detail to the prison raid at Son Tay, in North Vietnam, leaving the chief questions unanswered.

For instance, leaders of the U.S. commando force, an air force brigadier-general and an army colonel, were both stationed at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida.

Was, then, the force raised and rehearsed in the U.S., or, say, in the Panama Canal Zone, and taken as a unit to a staging area at the last moment for security purposes?

"It was a rather elaborate operation," said Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim. "There was meticulous training and the training occurred at several places."

Why isn't further detail provided? The assault on the prison camp early Saturday Hanoi time was disclosed Monday by Defence Secretary Melvin Laird. While surprise is important isn't there room for detail on such things as the size of the camp and eyewitness accounts from some of the men who took part in a raid that is now history?

SECURITY INVOLVED

"There are some pretty severe security problems involving the men who went in and the prisoners," Laird answered. "It would compromise intelligence sources and the safety of those involved."

This much of the picture has been supplied by official accounts and questioning in the last two days:

Army and air force volunteers —one report suggests a force of 40—sped in helicopters across the North Vietnamese delta to the compound at the Red River bank town of Son Tay, 20 miles west of Hanoi.

FIND NO AMERICANS

The Americans say the raid was a complete surprise. It took place at 2 a.m., with only a quarter moon. A helicopter was purposely crash-landed in the compound to make sure the force got inside.

The force was inside for less than an hour, ripping open cells with chain saws, cutting torches and lock snips, finding crude conditions but no Americans.

Probably the force met at a point outside the compound for helicopter pickup. Since a "large percentage" of the 459 official prisoners of Hanoi were hoped to be rescued a much larger attack force probably was ready.

Delicate co-ordination would have been needed so as to not bunch up helicopters in the danger zone. Evidently it can be supposed the helicopters kept close to the ground to avoid radar detection as long as possible and making anti-aircraft fire less effective.

It is more likely the choppers came from over the mountains, perhaps from bases in Thailand. This would provide more radar security. Navy carriers would provide more initial security but the helicopters would be more detectable once they were airborne.

These suppositions are supported by the fact an air force officer, Brig.-Gen. LeRoy Manor, was in over-all command.

The ground leader, Army Col. Arthur Simons, 52, known as "The Bull," has a dossier full of elite assignments starting with the Rangers in the Second World War and including the Special Forces' SOG—Studies and Observation Group—in Vietnam.

Sources insist Green Beret attempts have been made before to free U.S. prisoners in North Vietnam. Laird denies it. None of these efforts was ever said, even in rumor, to have been successful.

Pentagon spokesmen have left the door open for more Son Tay's.

They will not even answer these questions:

In what way were conditions "crude?" Why were locks on cells jimmied if the cells were empty? Why were empty cells locked in the first place? Why was an empty prison camp guarded? Could it be that the prisoners had been moved only several hundred yards, away?

The Pentagon said Tuesday it has learned unofficially that 22 men have died in the North.

The First U.S. Thanksgiving Was in 1621

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Fourth Thursday in November (that's tomorrow) is American Thanksgiving Day. This fact was brought up quite casually a short time ago while a few of us sipped coffee.

Forbes

And the inquiring one in our midst immediately wished to know why this particular date for American Thanksgiving. Also why Canadian Thanksgiving is celebrated in October.

Not only did she wish to know, she challenged me to find out and to tell her through this column. In order to please her and, at the same time, to whet my own curiousity, I went delving and I've come up with the following facts about American Thanksgiving.

● In 1621, after a most bountiful harvest, Governor William Bradford, proclaimed that the young colony set aside its labors and give thanks for the many blessings bestowed upon it. The occasion was marked by a three-day festival of feasting and merriment and the observance was repeated each year afterward in Plymouth, becoming a New England custom.

● In April, 1789, George Washington became the first president of the United States and that autumn, in the tradition of the Pilgrim Fathers, Congress asked the president to declare a "national" day of thanksgiving.

In response, President Washington gave a message to his countrymen declaring Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day of thanks.

No further proclamation was made and after that year most states reverted to their own designated dates for thanksgiving observance and there was no day set aside for all.

● It was a young woman, Sarah Josepha Buell Hale, who crusaded for and finally won a national observance.

In 1828, when she became editor of a woman's magazine her pointed editorials were widely read. She wrote letters and made verbal pleas to community leaders, to Congress and even to President Abraham Lincoln himself.

Her suggestions were ignored. Then, in 1863, came the Battle of Gettysburg and the end of the confederacy. This, to Sarah Hale, made a day of united thanksgiving even fore imperative.

She increased her efforts with the result that in October of that year, the president signed an official Thanksgiving Day proclamation — the first since Washington in 1789.

In Sarah's eyes this was only a partial victory. She still had hopes of having the special day set aside as a national holiday. Her letters and her pleas continued until in 1864, President Lincoln finally set aside the last Thursday of November as Thanksgiving Day for all U.S. citizens.

Presidents from then on made similar declarations. Finally, in 1941, Congress ruled that the observance be changed to the fourth Thursday in November.

First observance in Canada came on Nov. 6, 1879, when, as in the New England states more than 250 years before, thanks was given for a bountiful harvest.

From then until the First World War the observance was continued but the time and date varied considerably. Sometimes it was late and sometimes early in the autumn and governored, at least, by the harvest full moon.

After the war a proclamation was declared setting the Monday nearest Armistice Day as a day of thanksgiving.

By 1921 there was another proclamation and for the next 10 years, both armistice and thanksgiving were celebrated on the same Monday in November. In 1931 they were again separated and the word "armistice" was changed to "remembrance."

Finally, in 1957, an official proclamation set Canada's Thanksgiving Day as the second Monday in October.

'STREET LAMP UNFAIR TO COURTING COUPLES'

ELLESMERE, England (UPI) — Councilman Levi Jones, a 71-year-old bachelor, told colleagues the town's plan to install a street lamp opposite a bus shelter would offend courting couples.

"I know my courting days are over," Jones said "But I don't see why the youngsters should have their's interferred with. I think the council are being spoilsports.

"When the youngsters hear their kissing and cuddling will have to stop, they will raise a howl of protest. I will support them."

Canada Must Get Sea Knowledge

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — To harvest the fabulous mineral and other riches of the sea, Canada must become a major source of knowledge and expertise about marine environment.

The Science Council of Canada concludes this in a report today to the government, which is urged to take speedy action on some matters and begin long-term planning as well.

For immediate action, the council wants the government to initiate a major marine science and technology program aimed at systematically acquiring knowledge and at balanced development of marine resources.

Substantial benefit could be reaped from mineral resources, especially offshore oil and gas which could make a major socio-economic impact on Canada in the next few years.

Oil exploitation alone promises future economic activity probably amounting to several billions a year.

SUGGESTS TWO PROJECTS

Two other major projects suggested for urgent attention are:

—Control of ice cover on the St. Lawrence Gulf as the world's first serious test of the possibilities of deliberate climate control.

—Balanced management of the resources of the Strait of Georgia, preceded by urgent study of the impact of oil exploration and exploitation on the area.

The chief agent of this conscious effort to become a world leader in marine science and technology would be a proposed Crown corporation, Canadian Ocean Development Corp.

Such an agency could organize marine development and innovation projects and actively promote marketing of products and services.

The Science Council warns at several points that, if Canada and the Canadian government fail to do this job, other countries will.

MAKES PROPOSALS

A variety of structures for formulating, implementing and reviewing policies are proposed. The report is based on soon-to-be-published studies by Dr. R. W. Stewart of University of British Columbia and Dr. L. M. Dickie of the federal fisheries research board.

Among the proposals:

—A marine science research institute on the Pacific coast as a counterpart of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography at Dartmouth, N.S.

—A national board on marine activity with government, industry and university representatives to advise of national policy.

—A standing advisory committee on marine science and technology to advise on marine environment matters at the national and international levels.

The council says federal spending in marine science and technology should grow from $51.2 million last year to $300 million by 1980.

China Warns U.S.

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China has issued its 477th serious warning against alleged military provocation by an American aircraft, the New China news agency reported. The military aircraft flew for three minutes in China's airspace over Yunghsing Island in Kwangtung province Sunday, the agency said.

DREAM TIME

Warm Memories For a Chilly Day

By Jack Scott

Foul weather does strange things to me and now, driving out to the West Bay Marina at Sidney, the snow still rotting on the hills, more in the offing and the temperature in the low 40s, I felt even stranger than usual.

Just going to look at the Tahitian ketch was ridiculous, in the first place, considering my current bank balance, and I confessed as much to the owner. He didn't seem to mind. Graciously, as all true yachtsmen are on such occasions, he took me below into the snug, compact cabin and we talked awhile about how she handles in open waters.

"If you've done any ocean sailing at all," he said, "you'll appreciate her qualities. On our last run from Oahu . . ."

★ ★ ★

Suddenly my mind had gone back to that winter when, cruising through the South Sea Islands, we had put in briefly to lovely Wanna-Wanna, truly a paradise of the Pacific.

Scott

The curious thing is that we had planned to visit Wanna-Wanna for only a day or two to replenish the provisions aboard our yawl, Jenny May. Little did we dream it would be two months before we were to leave those magic shores.

Wanna-Wanna is a small and crescent-shaped atoll. As we dropped Jenny May's hook into its blue, beautiful Lana Lagoon, the whole of the island's jungle-green length was in our gaze. I remember turning to Schnauzer, my first mate, and saying, "We must stay awhile here."

"Here Time holds one in its cupped hands," Schnauzer said, for he was a poetic sort of chap.

The lovely Lana Lagoon almost defies description. The coral reefs which protect it are as treacherous as any I ever encountered in the South Seas (I had to use all my skill, learned in the copra trade, to sail Jenny May through the single, narrow passage) but, once inside that barrier, it was lake-calm.

Schnauzer and I stood transfixed on the after forepeak, looking in silent awe at the jungle that marched clear down to the azure salt water. A flamingo walked daintily from between two of the giant palms that leaned across the serene face of the lagoon, and waded into the water on his long, stilt-like legs.

Nought broke the silence but the distant tympany of the surf upon the reef, the harsh cry of the white cockatoos flitting about the jungle and the slurping sound of the unicorn fish feeding on the lagoon's glassy surface.

"Truly the enchanted isle," Schnauzer said when he at last found his voice, and we went below to prepare our trinkets for the natives.

It was not merely the magnificence of the setting that caused us to tarry so long in Wanna-Wanna. The natives themselves had somehow been overlooked by the missionaries and were unspoiled, friendly, simple people.

We were particularly impressed with the indescribably beautiful, brown-skinned native maidens who wore only the native grass skirt (or "pui") yet caused us to wonder at their dignity and quiet charm. Sometimes at night, Schnauzer and I would sit on deck under the canopy of stars, listening to their sweet voices and crude ukeleles playing the plaintive Wanna-Wanna song (which may be freely translated, "If You Wanna Me, Then I Wanna You.")

Our every need was looked after by these obliging people. Each day they brought us young, succulent pigs, fruits of all descriptions, cocoanuts rich with milk (including one type from the southern end of the island which was delightfully alcoholic), exotic fowl of all descriptions and native cigarettes (or "pui") which had the taste of a fine cigar.

•

The weather was unchangeable. Each day the sun beat down on Jenny May's teak decks, yet the cool breeze from beyond the coral reef provided welcome relief.

Each day we experienced what we called "the afternoon rain." This phenomenon occurred precisely at 2 p.m. (Wanna-Wanna daylight saving time) and lasted exactly 22 minutes, leaving the atmosphere wonderfully refreshed. We took advantage of this period to fill our water casks and to shower.

I remember best those days when, ambition upon us, we ventured into the lagoon by native canoe to fish. Old Ukey-Ukey, our guide, would paddle us out across the sundappled lagoon to the reef. Beneath our slender craft, through the translucent depths of the water, we would see the shimmering pastel pinks and greens of the living coral.

All manner of strange fish would glide beneath us — the ugly, lemon yellow trigger fish (which the natives call "Humu-humu nukunuku apua'a"), the magnificent parrot fish with its coal black body and brilliant green teeth, the comical surgeonfish (or "pui"), and occasionally a stray, friendly shark.

Schnauzer and I would don our water goggles, take our bamboo spears in hand, slip over the side and swim down into the green, dancing depths for a little sport. Words alone cannot describe the feel of the water in that lagoon. It was, as Schnauzer so aptly put it, like swimming through champagne.

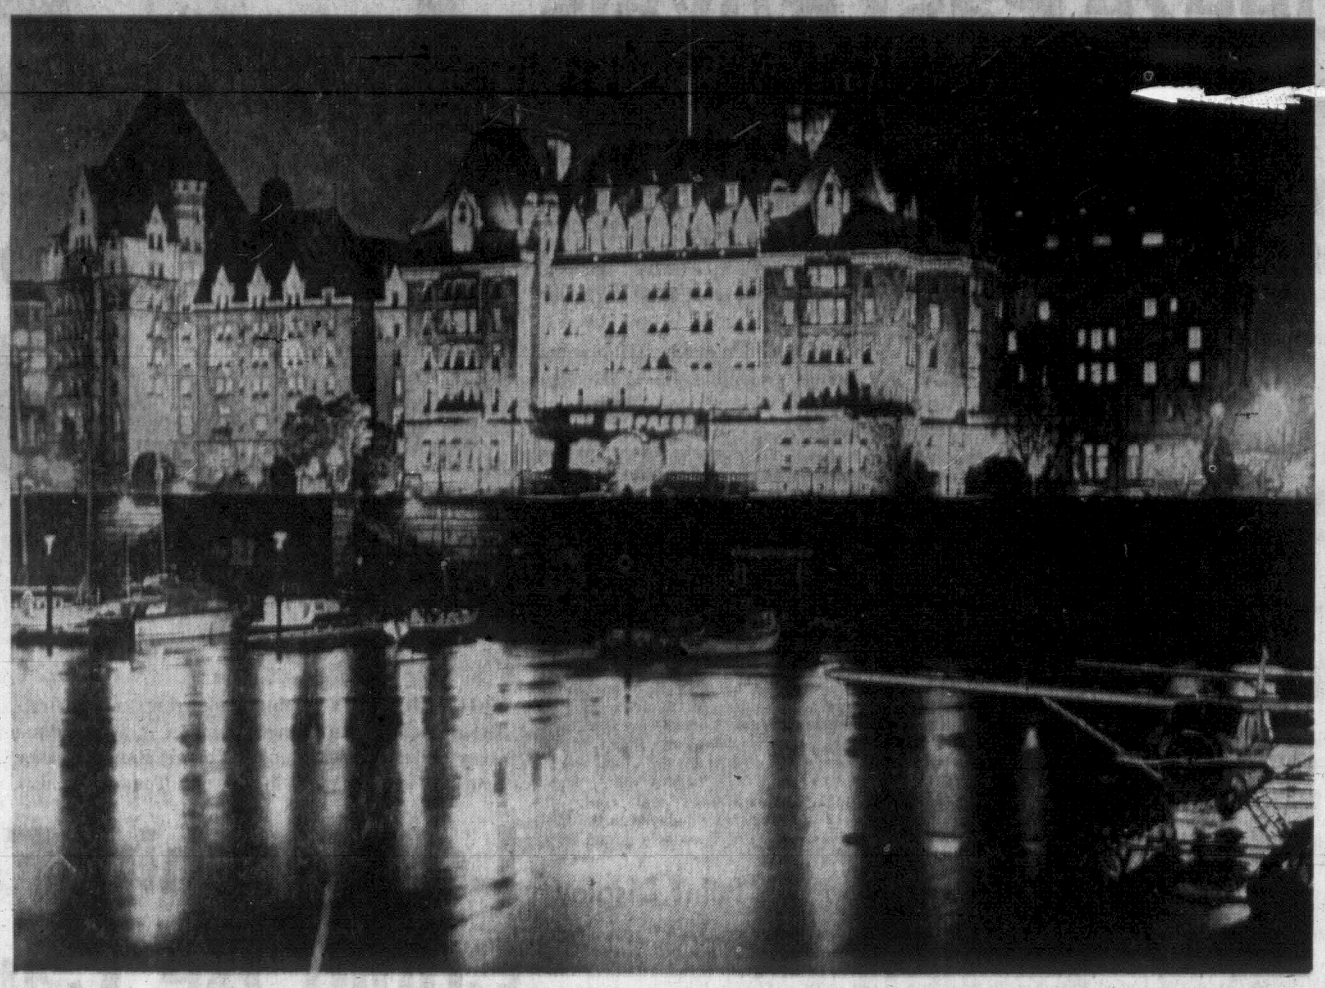

Then back to the Jenny May with our catch for the day. There we would find a fresh supply of coconuts from the southern end of the island, and perchance a bevy of maidens come to giggle in their charming fashion at the strange ways of "the men from across the sea."

We would retire to our cabins to change our loin cloths (for we always dressed for dinner) and on returning to the deck would see the great South Sea moon (or "pui") coming out of the sea . . .

★ ★ ★

"Yes," the owner of the Tahitian ketch at the West Bay Marina was saying, "if you've done any ocean sailing at all you'll appreciate her qualities." We stood on her deck, shivering, looking up at the bare spars, the rigging rattling in the dismal wintery wind.

"To tell you the truth, I've never sailed anything bigger than a 14-foot dory and never farther than five miles into the Gulf of Georgia," I admitted, "but the rest I know all about."

'Environment 100:' Will 10,000 Sign?

By DON VIPOND

Early in the new year the people behind Environment 100 will hold a "signature blitz."

They hope 10,000 will sign up for a commonsense approach to mothering nature.

The trouble with environment issues is everybody cares, but hardly anybody understands what they are all about. Environment 100 is the name of the project a local group launched in May to correct the situation.

It appears to be a Canadian first and although it's just got rolling, all manner of people are lining up behind it.

And because it's hardly started rolling, it's long on volunteers and work to be done, short on money and space to grow. The next few months will probably settle whether it thrives or dies.

Put It Together

Environment 100 isn't a shrill pack of conservationists, nor is it a glib spokesman for the corporate polluters. What it's going to try and do on regional issues is put it all together — provide a factual information service — so people can be armed with something more than grudges and gossip to make up their own minds how a pollution problem should be tackled.

The idea for an environmental information centre came from the University of Victoria's Biology Club, after it held its big Environment Tomorrow teach-in in the spring.

The public is alerted to the variety of environment threats now, explains Mrs. Betsy Sweeney, one of the new project's workers. What they want now is action.

The centre won't offer opinions on issues. It will supply instead all the objective information it can gather. There is a wealth of material but it needs to be pulled together.

This job is under way in a cluttered office at Uvic's Student Union Building. About 50 volunteers, mostly students, are lending a hand.

Unlikely Allies

Such a rational approach to meeting often-emotional environment issues has already made for some strange bedfellows — the biology club and the Vancouver Island branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada for example.

In the past engineers and biologists have exchanged some harsh words on how much of a threat ocean dumping of sewage represents.

There is a Citizens' Committee for an Environmental Centre and it includes Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen and city manager Dennis Young. These two haven't exactly shared all views on city development problems.

About 100 people were invited to join the citizens' committee and it is mainly their personal contributions which are meeting Environment 100's day-to-day expenses.

The cost of the operation is now running about $500 a month and the organization is solvent until mid-December, says Marc Bell, Uvic biologist and acting chairman of the citizens' committee.

Group Support

Recently B.C. Forest Products Ltd. donated $250, not only a financial boost but another indication of the breadth of appeal the project has developed.

Groups which have offered their endorsement include Saanich and Sidney councils, Victoria's Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Chamber, the Greater Victoria school board, the Victoria Humanist Fellowship, the Vancouver Island branch of the Architectural Institute of Canada and the Capital region of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Bell says 10,000 signatures on a statement supporting the environmental centre concept would be the sort of public support which could lead to financial assistance from governments.

Ideally, he says, the day will come when the centre can be totally independent, perhaps financed through a foundation.

Initial indications are that the objective of 10,000 signatures isn't idealistic. Certainly the volunteers to date have come thick and fast.

When a teacher in a city school last week said she needed three students to come to a meeting dealing with the project, 35 hands went up in the class.

There will be a lot of young people among those collecting the signatures in places like shopping plazas next Jan. 15 and 16. A door-to-door campaign is planned for Jan. 17 to 21.

Meanwhile the centre's library of environmental facts is growing in that cluttered office at the university.

Sue Laubenstein, Mrs. Sweeney and their volunteers are assembling a film directory, a speakers' bureau, a catalogue system for the swelling volume of material, a list of scientific and professional advisers, experts from a variety of fields available to answer specific questions.

Getting Contacts

The centre is establishing contacts with municipal, regional and provincial agencies as well as local groups with environmental interests.

Already four of five people a day are calling or writing or dropping in with their questions or problems.

Bell hopes that a year from now the centre will be in suitable quarters and have the full-time staff it badly needs.

Million Gallon Effort

Greater Victorians have conserved up to one million gallons of water a day in response to attempts to save salmon trying to spawn in Goldstream River.

Water Commissioner Ron Upward told the water board Tuesday that another inch of rainfall in the near future could mean water conserving measures can be relaxed.

Mayor Courtney Haddock called the public response to the board's request to save water "phenomenal."

But the board authorized release of another 50 million gallons to aid the salmon run should the need arise.

•

Upward said the number of coho that have reached spawning grounds is estimated at 1,000; the number of chum is about 5,000.

The average amount of water conserved since the first appeal was made Nov. 6 has been about 500,000 gallons a day, for a total of 10,500,000 gallons.

The Greater Victoria Water District normally consumes between 15 million and 16 million gallons a day.

The board also agreed to send a summary of its actions to federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis who earlier insisted that sufficient water for the salmon run be first priority.

Although the board does not intend to press the matter, its solicitor says the federal Fisheries Act does not take precedence over domestic use of the water.

•

Haddock said he did not want to prejudice the board's position by releasing legal details, but a summary of the legalities was contained in a letter from Upward to the board.

"The Act does not apply because of a special provincial act, still in force which protects the (water) district. Correspondence from, the fisheries department would suggest this to have been their view. The district has operated on this assumption. For the record, the commission has not received any directive, verbal or in writing to release water this year."

Elford Denies Council Arrogant

Mayor Frances Elford today denied accusations made by Conrad Watling, president of the Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association, that Oak Bay council shows "complete disregard for the wishes of the people."

Watling criticized council on Tuesday for passing a bylaw governing the storage of boats, camper bodies and trailers.

He added: "One of the prime things this council has done again and again and again is that if it's not successful the first time, it lets things die down and then redrafts and reintroduces it."

Mrs. Elford said today that Watling is ill-informed.

"I'm rather amazed that these statements are made by somone who never attends a council meeting and, to my knowledge, never avails himself of the minutes or contacts anyone who can give him more accurate information."

Passage of the bylaw, designed to amend one made in 1968 that forbade any of the items from being stored in front of a resident's property, had had a stormy passage.

Two public hearings drew many out to protest.

Why, then, did council persist?

The mayor said today that it was council's intention to ease the restrictions of the 1968 bylaw which was still in effect up until Monday.

BANK THEFT HERO NAGGED BY POLICE

A Saanich man fined $10 today for keeping a horse on his property said he would go to jail rather than pay.

Delmar Crow of 740 Newbury, pleaded guilty. Judge William Ostler asked him to reconsider serving the term and gave him two weeks to pay.

Crow said he was arrested by Saanich police Tuesday, adding he thought this overzealous. He explained he had been trying to sell his house. The horse belongs to his 16-year-old son, who purchased it with his own money.

"It was bought in preference to a motorcycle," said the father.

The Saanich bylaw prohibits keeping a horse on a property less than 1.6 acres. Ostler told Crow that a horse as a pet was "an excellent thing" but "you find yourself in technical difficulty."

It wasn't Crow's first encounter with Saanich police. He was honored by the department and Saanich council earlier this year when he helped catch a bank robber.

Arthur Mayse . . .

THIS MORNING I DIALED my favorite trading post and got a response that caused me to snort and quiver.

"Season's greetings!" said the pleasant female voice at the other end.

What season?

Was she wishing me a happy November?

Nope! In the department stores even though Christmas is still a month distant, T'is the Season to be Jolly.

Bah! Humbug!

Not Christmas itself, you understand. Even grim, old Ebenezer Scrooge changed his mind about that. I'm also aware that it's wise, and sometimes essential, to do your Christmas shopping early. But this jumping of the gun — these premature deckings of the halls of commerce — those overstuffed Santas who make with the big ho-ho-ho before December's so much as launched — are combining to do in the year's finest festival.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus . . . may I be forgiven for dragging his name into print untimely. But what was once an affair of the heart is being replaced by a marathon assault on the pocketbook, and I'm not sure how much longer the Christmas spirit can survive it.

Meanwhile, t'isn't the season to be jolly here. And until it is, this hall will remain determinedly undecked by so much as a sprig of handcrafted holly.

A MAN'S HOME MAY BE his castle, but if it's situated within the Oak Bay borders, he'd better be careful what he parks in the public view. No boats, the municipal council insists, and no trailers.

Unless he can wangle an exemption permit, which might be difficult to obtain, he must henceforth beware of storing 'em beyond the front line of his house.

With this heavy-handed ukase laid on its residents, perhaps Oak Bay might choose to apply further restraints. Here are some suggestions:

Garage doors to be kept closed at all times. (Somebody might be shocked by a glimpse of the utilitarian clutter inside.)

No gardening on Sundays, unless said gardener shields his operation from public view behind a portable screen.

Lawn grass to be maintained at a uniform height, and a per-dandelion fine levied.

This, of course, is nonsense. But so is the Tweedy government's insistence on shoving its outdoors-minded denizens around through the agency of a nuisance bylaw so blatantly intended to placate one element at the expense of another.

EARLIER THIS FALL, I asked for information about Victoria Round Table Club, the name of which appears on a sun dial at the centre of a fine circular rose garden in Beacon Hill Park.

What is this club, I wanted to know, and does it still exist? In answer to that last question, the Round Table Club remains active. Its members in fact, will meet this evening at Oak Bay Beach Hotel for six-o'clock dinner and an address by Col. John Nelson, newly-appointed Salvation Army public relations secretary for Canada and Bermuda.

For a reply to the first query — what the club is — I'm indebted to W. T. Straith, a past president and a member for about 40 years.

Victoria Round Table Club began life as a branch of an American parent organization. Presently, though, it settled into a comfortable and independent existence as a local group whose members gather once a month to dine and to hear good speakers.

Eloquent John Oliver, then Liberal premier of British Columbia, was one of the first. Long-term member Straith recalls that Sir Frederick Grant Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, was another distinguished Canadian who addressed the Round Tablers.

The rose garden and sun dial?

"We found ourselves with a little surplus money at one time," he explains. "We turned it over to Herb Warren (Victoria parks chief now retired) and he used it to put in the rose garden. The idea for the sun-dial came from Dr. J. A. Pearce of the observatory. He felt that since all the paths came together, a sun-dial would make a good centrepiece. Dr. Pearce designed it, and we paid for the materials."

The inscribed dial still marks the sunny hours, and though not too many of its original members remain, the Round Table Club is very much alive-o. Membership, well over 50, I'm told, and on the increase.

Troubles in Second Period Placed Win Skein in Peril

By ERNIE FEDORUK

"I suppose," said Victoria Cougars' general manager Eric Bishop, "you can say this is junior hockey."

As a quick, over-all observation, it adequately sums up the Cougars' 8-6 British Columbia Junior Hockey League victory over New Westminster Royals at Memorial Arena on Tuesday.

Coach Ron Maxwell, concerned with technical purity, didn't try for a brief summation although he appreciated the start and welcomed the end result.

He did not like, even briefly, that which occured between.

The Cougars started with a march that was as impressive as anything the Coldstream Guards could muster, stepped off to a 6-0 lead.

Then they staggered like a common, Saturday-night drunkard before finally making it home safely with their fourth straight victory.

The juniors do indeed make it, uh, interesting . . .

They stir mixed emotions.

Winning is important to many, and the Cougars did that to lengthen their first-place hold to seven points over Vancouver Centennials. The method is important to others, and here the Cougars broke even.

They broke even because of that brilliant start.

It was a complete effort. One period of superb team play that would be difficult to match by any other 20-minute session in Cougars' four-year history. Even when they rolled to 1-0 and 17-0 victories a few weeks ago, the Cougars didn't show the sustained and controlled power they displayed in the first period of Tuesday's game.

Plowe Turns Up Five-Point Display

Victoria's positional play, passing and skating — the three basics — was nigh near perfect. So much so that each line looked capable of scoring with every shift.

That Royals, late in arriving, found themselves in a 5-0 hole at the end of the first period. It went to 6-0 early in the second, and Cougars looked well on their way to another big night.

It didn't turn out that way.

Everything that was done so well in the first period was virtually forgotten in the second and third. Skating and passing became mediocre, and positional play deplorable.

Winger Ted Plowe, the league's leading scorer, was Victoria's brightest and most consistent light. He scored two goals and set up three for a five-point performance that boosted his point total to 35.

★ ★ ★

SHORT CHIPS: Robinson scored his goal on his first shift on the ice after coming off a two-week layoff because of a back injury . . . Bond suffered a nasty cut on the back of his left leg late in the game but is expected to play Saturday night when Cougars entertain Vernon at Memorial Arena . . .

Ex-Cougar Murray Kennett returned to Royals' lineup after missing three games with a shoulder injury . . . He aggravated the ailment in the second period and missed the rest of the game . . . Westminster coach Buster Brayshaw went the rest of the way with only three rearguards . . . Victoria's changing tide is reflected in their shooting . . . Cougars took 27 shots in the first period and only nine in the second . . . Ed Forslund started for Victoria but gave way to Darryl Fedorak when Royals scored their fifth goal early in the third period.

Broncs Surge Past Rockets

PENTICTON (CP) — Penticton Broncos, down two goals after one period, came back to take a 5-4 B.C. Junior Hockey League win over Kamloops Rockets Tuesday and pull three points ahead of Kamloops in the Okanagan division.

Kamloops goals by Gary Howatt and Larry Simon gave the Rockets a 2-0 first-period advantage which Broncos erased in the second, outscoring the Rockets 3-1.

Penticton scored twice early in the third, then held on against a furious Kamloops finishing surge for the victory.

Fred Parent paced the Broncos with two goals, including the winner.

By The Canadian Press

When the 1970-71 National Hockey League season opened this year the prediction was that Vancouver and Buffalo would finish at the bottom of the East division.

The reasoning was that the two expansion clubs—without a nucleus of big-name players—would find the going tough against the more established clubs.

But as the NHL moves into its second quarter, the Vancouver team is giving every indication it does not intend to fold. Tuesday night the Canucks held on to defeat Minnesota North Stars 3-2 in an NHL game, strengthening their hold on fourth place in the division.

THIRD IN ROW

The win—the third in a row for Vancouver—gave the Canucks 21 points, six more than fifth-place Detroit Red Wings, who were idle. The Canucks now have nine wins against 10 losses and three ties. However, their 22 games are the most played so far this season, three more than fifth-place Detroit, third-place Montreal Canadiens and first-place Boston Bruins. The other teams in the division each have played 18 games.

In other games Tuesday night, Boston and St. Louis Blues played to a 5-5 tie, and Toronto Maple Leafs and Pittsburgh Penguins also tied, 4-4.

Possibly the secret to Vancouver's success is the leadership the team is receiving from such NHL castoffs as their captain Orland Kurtenbach and Wayne Maki and the occasional outstanding netminding from Charlie Hodge.

HODGE SPARKLES

Hodge was again sharp Tuesday night as he kicked out 28 shots, many of them at point-blank range, to frustrate the North Stars, who hold third place in the West Division.

Vancouver pulled into a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Ray Cullen and Andre Boudrias but Tom Williams scored late in the period to narrow the lead to 2-1.

Rosaire Paiment increased the lead for Vancouver to 3-1 early in the period and Hodge's solid netminding protected that lead until 18:51 of the second period when Murray Oliver scored. He held the North Stars scoreless in the third period.

Boston moved into sole possession of first place with its tie against St. Louis. The Bruins, with 27 points, now are a point ahead of the idle New York Rangers.

PULL GOALIE

Tim Ecclestone's goal with 48 seconds left in the game gave St. Louis the tie after the Blues pulled goalie Ernie Wakely with 1:10 remaining.

The Blues, led by Bill Sutherland's two goals, had to battle from 2-0 and 4-2 deficits to earn the tie. Ken Hodge also scored two goals for the Bruins. Hodge's second goal at 7:19 of the third period had given Boston a 5-4 lead.

The Leafs also had to overcome an early deficit to earn the tie against the Penguins. Wally Boyer, with a goal in the first period, and Keith McCreary, Ken Schinkel and Ron Schock with second-period goals, had given the Penguins a 4-2 lead but goals by Guy Trottier and Billy MacMillan in the third period earned the tie for the Leafs.

Although Les Binkley faced 37 shots in the Pittsburgh goal, he was never under much pressure from the Toronto forwards as most of their shots came from near the blueline.

TRADED today by Los Angeles Kings to Buffalo Sabres were National Hockey League veterans Dick Duff (above) and Eddie Shack. Punch Imlach, manager-coach of Sabres, said Shack and Duff were acquired for player to be named later and future consideration.

Battle Royal On Mat Card

Ten wrestlers will stage a battle royal in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

Falls will not count and a wrestler must be thrown over the top rope to be eliminated. Last grappler left in the ring is the winner.

In preliminary bouts starting at 8 p.m., Bulldog Brown battles Steven Little Bear, Johnny Quinn fights Dan Kroffat, Don Leo Jonathan tackles Chatti Yokuchi and Eric Froelich tangles with Pancho Lopez.

These eight, as well as Yasu Fuji and Duncan McTavish, will then clash in the battle royal.

Pierre's Patience Pays Off With Date in Grey Cup Game

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Desjardins suffered through five losing years with Montreal Alouettes and although he doesn't discourage easily, he came quite close to quitting the Eastern Football Conference club last fall.

But now the patience seems to have paid off as Desjardins and his team-mates prepare for their Grey Cup meeting with Calgary Stampeders Saturday.

Desjardins had taken a job as a sales manager with a tobacco company and found it was taking quite a bit of his time.

"Football was starting to lose its appeal," said Desjardins. "The only thing that kept me in the game was Sam (head coach Etcheverry). When he got the job, I wanted to play again."

Desjardins feels that the new management, headed by owner Sam Berger, has given the Alouettes the impetus to bring them to the top.

"We always had pretty good ball players, but there was something missing. I remember before the game, we would get together and tell ourselves that we were going to play for ourselves . . ."

'FILLED WITH CLIQUES'

"Those teams were filled with cliques, Goldie (former defensive coach Ralph Goldston) had his boys, the defence fought with the offence, guys were always complaining. Now we're together. We've got a great team.

"I knew that we would come up with a good team this year, but I was discouraged when we tied Hamilton in the final game of the season. That meant we had to go to Toronto. But the team was sure of one thing—if we beat Toronto, there was no way we could lose to Hamilton in the final."

So the Alouettes, because they beat Hamilton, are making another trip to Toronto—this time for the national championship.

Etcheverry was scheduled to put his charges through a workout this morning and then they were to be feted at a pep rally at downtown Place Ville Marie before heading for Toronto.

COLD BOTHERS SAM

Etcheverry ran his charges through a workout Tuesday but it was distinguished mainly by the cold weather. After the practice the coach said he preferred the wet conditions and mud in which his team played their two EFC playoff games against Hamilton.

"That field was getting pretty hard out there this afternoon," said Etcheverry. "I hear it's supposed to be about 25 down in Toronto.

"We are having some broom ball shoes sent along just in case we come up with a frozen field this weekend. But I'm really hoping for warmer weather. We didn't slip around that much in the mud."

The forecast for the Grey Cup weekend is wet snow or rain Friday continuing into the early part of Saturday with afternoon temperatures Saturday a little above freezing.

Vancouver Referee Gets Grey Cup Job

TORONTO (CP) — Don Barker of Vancouver has been appointed referee for the Grey Cup football game Saturday at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium.

Barker, who will be officiating in his first Grey Cup game, is one of six officials appointed by the Canadian Football League for the game between Montreal Alouettes and Calgary Stampeders.

Three game officials are from the Western Conference and three are from the East. The referee alternates each year between the East and West.

Besides Barker, officials are: Bob Shepherd, Toronto, line upmire; Ken Stein, Vancouver, back umpire; Harold Ferguson, Edmonton, head linesman; Chuck Paul, Ottawa, field judge. Harry Ross, Montreal, the sixth official, is a standby.

Avery Accused Of Persecution

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the International Olympic Committee, was accused today of persecuting skiing in general and Alpine skiing in particular.

Sigge Bergman, secretary-general of the International Ski Federation, (FIS) made the comment in the wake of the disclosure Tuesday that Brundage had written the FIS demanding an explanation of reports that nine Alpine ski stars were paid $50 a day plus living and travel expenses at a training camp in Mammouth Mountain, Calif.

An IOC spokesman said if the reports are confirmed the nine will be banned from the 1972 Winter Olympic Games at Sapporo, Japan.

"This is a new dispiriting chapter in his (Brundage's) prestige struggle in which he does everything to preserve Olympic rules which have been out of date for long," Bergman said in Stockholm.

TWO CANADIANS

"I am asking myself the question whether there will be any Winter Games in 1972. Not even the Japanese are sure about it."

The nine were identified as France's world slalom champion Jean-Noel Augert and his fellow Frenchmen, Georges Mauduit and Jean-Luc Pinel; Jean Daetwyler and Dumeng Giovanoli of Switzerland, West German downhill star Fran Vogler, Terje Overland of Norway and two Canadians, Rod Hebron and Peter Duncan.

In Paris, Maurice Martel, president of the French Ski Federation, said the FIS should withdraw from the Olympic movement.

AGREEMENT SIGNED

Martel said that an agreement was signed in 1951 between the FIS and the IOC permitting competitive skiers to give instruction for pay if they withdrew from such activity six months before the start of the racing season.

"Mr. Brundage hates Alpine skiing," Martel said.

BILL WALKER

There's one characteristic of an English rugby fan that can never be denied. He's prejudiced, even to the point that the mere mention of the sport is a blow well struck for the game itself which is probably why there was dispatched to this desk a few days ago a glowing account of the centennial congress of rugby, held in England this September.

In fact the celebrations were world wide. But as another matter of interest, just about the time the herald angels were singing rugby's centennial praises, a heretic appeared in print in the London Daily Observer.

And do you know what?

William Webb Ellis didn't invent the game of rugby. Hold it, I know this is like saying the patron saint was a sinner, and the plaque on the boundary wall at Rugby is an untruth. It says:

"This stone commemorates the exploit of William Webb Ellis, who with a fine disregard for the rules of football as played in his time, first took the ball in his arms and ran with it, thus originating the distinctive feature of the Rugby game. A.D. 1823."

●

But the author, J. L. Manning, was armed with a page full of proof And even if Ellis wasn't really a sinner, and that's highly unlikely judging by his profession, it's obvious now that he never played rugby, either.

Manning points out that Ellis died without knowing what he was supposed to have done. And that he died as a clergyman at Menton, France, in 1872. The reason he didn't know he was to become famous is that the story of his fame didn't begin until four years after his death.

A chap by the name of Martin Bloxman, a solicitor by profession, who attended Rugby, but had departed three years before the purported incident, wrote to the school magazine in 1876, describing the exploit. He apparently had dreamed up the story because he wasn't at all certain of the actual date, and didn't reveal the source of his information, either.

Nevertheless, the story was accepted as fact, and the legend grew, Manning says. This was despite other evidence to the contrary that running with the ball at Rugby was still unknown when Thomas Arnold became headmaster at the school in 1828, three years after Ellis had graduated, and left.

●

Later, a famous English judge and sportsman, Sir Montague Shearman, wrote a history of football and chose to ignore the Ellis contribution to the game. This was in the 1890s, and the oversight infuriated members of the Old Rugbeians' Society, who immediately launched an inquiry into the matter.

By now, in 1895, there were very few around who might have been able to help. However, three witnesses were found, one who was with Ellis at Rugby, and two who were there shortly after. But they passed away before the inquiry report was published in 1897, and their passing may have saved the society from an embarrassing situation.

Because their testimony was that handling of the ball was not introduced to the game until after Ellis had left the school, which corroborated the earlier evidence of Arnold.

It is apparent that the committee chose to ignore the evidence of the departed trio, because they already had ordered the commemorative stone giving Ellis all the credit.

Which brings up the obvious question:

If Ellis didn't carry the ball at Rugby, who did? Well, it seems that after he left the school, a fellow by the name of Theodore Walrond did. At least he introduced that particular phase of the game, and drew up the rules, too.

Ellis? The only sport he played was cricket!

Shocking, isn't it?

FOOTBALL MANAGERS ASK FOR CHANGE

Fans Would Know Time

TORONTO (CP) — A meeting of Canadian Football League general managers Tuesday decided to recommend to the league executive that stadium time clocks be made the official timers for all games.

Ralph Sazio, Hamilton Tiger Cats' general manager and chairman of the meeting, said the managers agreed that timekeepers be moved up into the stands from field level and that they operate the field clock which is visible to the fans.

These facilities now exist at Hamilton, Calgary and Vancouver football fields but the general managers would like to see the practice made uniform throughout the league.

"Those timers down at field level often can't see an official's signal at the far end of the field with a bunch of players in the way," Sazio said.

The general managers' decision goes in the form of a recommendation to the league executive committee which meets Thursday.

League commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Tuesday that the league tried two weeks ago to get the field clock at the Canadian National Exhibition stadium connected to the official timers' bench for the Grey Cup game Saturday.

"But CNE officials told us that it would take about six months to get all the cable in and the electronic device set up," he said.

TO BE NAMED . . . . . PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Either Bench or Powell

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Bench and Boog Powell, most valuable players in their respective leagues, are the two nominees for Player of the Year, the Major League Baseball Promotion Corp. has announced.

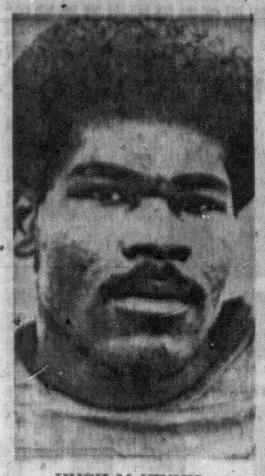

Bench, of the Cincinnati Reds, was the most valuable player in the National League; Powell, of the world champion Baltimore Orioles, the most valuable player in the American League.

The two Cy Young award winners, Bob Gibson of St. Louis in the National and Jim Perry of Minnesota in the American, are the nominees for pitcher of the year.

An award also will be given for the defensive player, minor league player and major league executive of the year and the player who best typifies the game on and off the field.

Winners will be announced Dec. 3.

All-Star Spot Caps Rookie's Big Year

HUGH McKINNIS
. . . unanimous choice

WAYNE HARRIS
. . . for 10th time

By The Canadian Press

Hugh McKinnis, Calgary Stampeders' left-handed halfback from Arizona State, capped a sensational rookie season Tuesday when he won unanimous selection to the Western Football Conference all-star team.

Saskatchewan won four spots on the offensive team and Calgary three. B.C. and Winnipeg Blue Bombers took two each and Edmonton Eskimos got one.

Edmonton dominated the defensive squad, taking five positions to three for Saskatchewan, two for Calgary and one each for B.C. and Winnipeg.

REPEAT PAIRING

The offensive guard pairing of Sugarman and Jack Abendschan of the Roughriders was a repeat from last year.

One big name missing, however, was Geoerge Reed of Saskatchewan who had been an all-star for five years. He was injured much of the season and lost out to McKinnis and Jim Evenson of B.C. — the leading rushers in the Canadian Football League during the regular season — and Silas McKinnie of Saskatchewan. It was a first time for McKinnis and McKinnie who bounced Reed and B.C.'s Jim Young from the all-star status they enjoyed last year.

For Bill Frank, offensive tackle with Winnipeg, it was a first selection as an all-star in the West. He was an Eastern Conference all-star for three year, 1966-68.

The 24-man team — made up of 12 offensive and 12 defensive players — was chosen by the Football Reporters of Canada and announced by FRC president Laurie Artiss of Regina.

Herm Harrison, tight-end teammate of McKinnis and another unanimous choice, made the all-star list for a fourth consecutive year, his fifth selection in six years.

The only other unanimous choices on the offensive squad were quarterback Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan Roughriders, fourth choice in five years, and Ken Sugarman, guard with British Columbia Lions, a second consecutive choice.

10th TIME FOR HARRIS

Wayne Harris, the only unanimous choice on the defensive squad, became an all-star linebacker for the 10th time.

The offensive centre selection was won by the Roughriders for a 12th consecutive year as Ted Urness won his sixth all-star berth. Before Urness, Neil Habig won it for six consecutive years.

The teams:

OFFENCE — Quarterback: Lancaster; running backs: McKinnis, Evenson, McKinnie; flanker: Mike Eben, Edmonton; centre: Urness; guards: Sugarman, Abendschan; tackles: Frank, Lanny Boleski, Calgary; tight end: Herm Harrison, Calgary; split end: Rick Shaw, Winnipeg.

DEFENCE — Ends: Ken Frith, Saskatchewan, Ron Forwick, Edmonton; tackles: John Helton, Calgary, Greg Pipes, Edmonton; middle linebacker: Harris; outside linebackers: Dave Gasser, Edmonton, Greg Findlay, B.C.; backs: John Wydareny, Edmonton, Ted Dushinski, Saskatchewan, Bruce Bennett, Saskatchewan, Joe Hernandez, Edmonton, Paul Brule, Winnipeg.

SWIM COURSE GRADUATES EARN CRESTS

Canadian Amateur Swimming Association "official" crests will be presented tonight to more than 40 men and women who have completed an eight-week course at the Victoria YM-YWCA.

The course is designed to prepare officials for the 1971 Canadian summer national swimming championships and the Centennial '71 International meet, scheduled next July in Victoria.

Approximately 40 swim enthusiasts are currently scheduled to attend the next course, which will start early in the new year.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Entering victory circle in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for fourth occasion is Stan Gallop, who topped men's five-pin division during seventh week of eighth annual competition. Stan launched winning 962 series with powerful 368 game then tagged on efforts of 305 and 289 in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome to earn weekly award that qualifies him for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Cents Tripped in 10th As U.S. Extends Skein

CARTAGENA, Colombia (CP) — Canada's national baseball team carried the strong United States team into 10 innings Tuesday before bowing 4-3. It was the U.S. squad's fifth consecutive victory and Canada's fourth loss in four games in the world amateur baseball championships.

The Canadians scored three runs in the ninth inning to tie the contest. But an unearned run in the 10th, driven home by Roger Schmuck off reliever Murray Gage-Cole of Vancouver, decided the issue.

WHIFFED FIRST 11

The team, built around Victoria Centennials, was handcuffed for eight innings by the U.S. starter, Burt Hooten, who gave up only one hit and struck out 16, including the first 11 Canadian batters. The only hit off him was by catcher Yves Blancard of Montreal, who had two in the game.

The Canadians came to life at the plate when Donavan relieved Hooten in the ninth. Dave McKay of Vancouver singled, Blanchard singled and Doug Hill of Victoria walked. Tom McKenzie of Kitchener, Ont., reached base on an error, with two runs scoring, and George Fuller of Victoria pinch-hit a single to tie the game.

THROWING ERROR

Starting pitcher Larry Webster of Vancouver was relieved by Gage-Cole in the sixth and the latter yielded only two hits in 4 2-3 innings. The winning run was unearned following an error by George Fuller on a throw.

Other scores Tuesday: Cuba 9 Italy 1; Puerto Rico 3, Holland 2; Nicaragua 8, Guatemala 0; Dominican Republic 6, Netherlands Antilles 2.

Three TD Tosses Despite Fracture

CHICAGO (AP) — Lefthanded quarterback Bobby Douglass, who threw four touchdown passes in Chicago's 31-13 National Football League victory over Buffalo Sunday, is out for the season with a broken left wrist.

The Bears have learned that Douglass suffered what he believed at the time was a sprain in the second quarter of the National Football League game and subsequently threw three of his touchdown passes with the broken wrist.

Hornets Will Chase Crown With Seven Soccer Rivals

Mount View Hornets, the newly-crowned Vancouver Island champions, will battle seven other teams from throughout the province in the first B.C. high school soccer tournment in Victoria this week.

In previous years the provincial title was decided strictly by a two-team, sudden-death match but the new tourney will be a modified double-loss elimination affair starting Thursday and lasting three days.

Castlegar (West Kootenay), Abbotsford (upper Fraser Valley), Winston Churchill (Vancouver), Kamloops (Okanagan Valley), Burnaby North (Burnaby-New Westminster), North Delta (West Fraser Valley) and Cowichan (Mid-North Island) will be joining Hornets for the competition.

FINAL ON SATURDAY

Four matches Thursday will start the tourney, followed by five on Friday and four more Saturday.

The championship final starts at 8 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic Park, the scene of the last match on Friday.

Admission is free to Thursday's tussles at Centennial Stadium and the adjacent University of Victoria pitch. Friday matches beginning at 9 and 11 a.m. are also free but admission to Saturday's matches and the Friday evening tussle at Royal Athletic Park is $1 for adults and 50-cents for students.

Burnaby North, the defending champion, meets Kamloops at Centennial Stadium in one of two 11 a.m. matches Thursday. Castlegar and Cowichan clash at the same time on the Uvic field.

At 2 p.m., Mount View tackles North Delta at Centennial and Winston Churchill faces Abbotsford half an hour later on the Uvic pitch.

Omniplex Decision At Edmonton Today

EDMONTON (CP) — Taxpayers were voting today whether to spend $32.5 million on a covered sports and convention centre which propenents say will be without equal in the world.

The proposed centre, called Omniplex, has its opponents who say that the money could be better spent on housing, libraries or other projects which rate a higher priority.

The building would house a covered football field, a hockey rink, track and field facilities, a convention floor, exhibition space and offices.

Cost of the building, according to backers of Omniplex, would be $22.9 million with the remainder going for equipment and furnishings, land acquisition, street widening, excavating and parking lots.

Proposed for a site bounded by 97th and 96th streets and 103A Avenue and the CNR tracks, it is a couple of minutes walk from the main downtown shopping area.

Interim project manager A. P. Morrow says for the price Edmonton will get 1.2 million square feet of floor space in a cross-shaped building covered by an overhanging roof.

"The only existing and somewhat similar concept is the Astrodome in Houston which does not hold trade shows or conventions, hockey or ice shows," says Mr. Morrow.

COST MORE

The Astrodome was built six years ago for $45 million.

The Omniplex would have 162,020 square feet of convention area on the main and mezzanine floors, as well as 32 meeting rooms and six large lounge areas.

Mr. Morrow says its exhibition display areas would be sufficient for all except extremely large trade shows. The design includes 136,000 square feet of office space.

The covered football stadium with 30,000 seats between the goal lines, could be expanded to 40,880 seats of which 35,060 would be between the goal lines. By incorporating end balconies, a seating capacity of 48,880 could be achieved.

Clarke Stadium, currently used by Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference, has a seating capacity of 20,600.

The football field would be converted to a hockey rink by moving seats on tracks to the ice surface, giving a seating capacity for hockey of 19,628.

William D. Hunter, president of Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada Hockey League, last week applied to the National Hockey League for an Edmonton franchise. Mr. Hunter is also a member of the citizens committee for Omniplex.

Voters have been bombarded with so-called facts and figures about Omniplex by its opponents and its proponents.

Fine Boosted For Loyalty To Fighter

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The California Boxing Commission refused to lift the home-state suspension of heavyweight Jerry Quarry when he failed to appear at a hearing which he asked for.

His trainer was fined $500 for going with Quarry to fight Mac Foster in New York City in a bout contracted first for Los Angeles.

Terry Bentham, the trainer, went before the commission after being ordered to pay a $100 fine for training a suspended fighter.

"I was loyal to Quarry," explained Bentham. "He's the only man I got."

A member of the commission asked Bentham: "How far would you carry that loyalty?" When the trainer replied, "If he went to New York again, I guess I'd go with him," the higher fine was promptly ordered.

Munson Sixth Yankee To Win Rookie Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Thurman Munson of New York Yankees was named the American League's 1970 Rookie of the Year Tuesday by a landslide margin, becoming the first catcher ever to win the award.

Munson, a stocky line-drive hitter, received all but one vote from a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

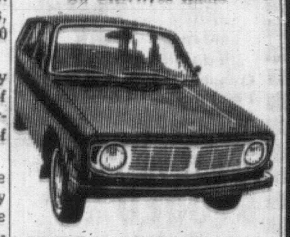

Outfielder Roy Foster of the Cleveland Indians got the other vote.

Munson, who led New York in batting with a .302 average and paced major league catchers in assists, is the sixth Yankee to win the AL rookie prize since its inception in 1949.

Munson, 23, hit six home runs and drove in 53 runs in 132 games. He also had 80 assists, half of them nailing opposing runners in 69 base-stealing attempts.

Foster, 25, batted .268, belted 23 homers and drove in 60 runs for the Indians.

Stanford Quarterback Wins Heisman Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Plumkett, Stanford University's rifle-armed quarterback who is all-time king of total offence and passing yardage, won the Heisman Trophy Tuesday as U.S. college football's outstanding performer of 1970.

Plumkett received a total of 2,229 points from the 1,059 electors in a battle with two other highly-touted quarterbacks — Joe Thiesmann of Notre Dame and Archie Manning of Mississippi. Theismann was second with 1,410 points and Manning third with 849.

Plumkett, a six-foot-three 204-pounder, has passed for 2,715 yards and 18 touchddowns in 11 games this season.

Two Canuck Bowlers In World Cup Tourney

COPENHAGEN (CP) — Amateur tenpin champions from more than 40 nations are converging on this Danish capital for Thursday's opening of the sixth annual World Cup bowling championship.

Graydon Robinson, a burly sheet-metal worker from Toronto, is on hand to defend the title he won last year in Tokyo.

Canada is the only country with two contestants. In addition to Robinson, Frank Boehm of Regina, the current national champion, will take a shot at the cup.

FINISHED SECOND

Among others hoping to unseat Robinson will be Ut Lenevat, the slender Thailand star who finished second last year after losing the final game to the big Canadian.

Wayne Zmuhal, 22, a graduate student at Northern Illinois University, will represent the United States.

Freddy Johansen, a 28-year-old cook from Norway, brings the highest book average into the tournament, 209. Another impressive starter is Peter Leung Sze-Yuon of Hong Kong, who has a 204 average.

Oarsmen Set August Date For Regatta

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has decided to change the dates of the Canadian Henley Regatta.

Because most Canadian competitors feel the season has ended when the Henley is over, and because of protests from other competition sponsors, the Henley will be moved to mid-August next year.

Normally it is held in July.

The association, at its annual meeting, elected Gerry Martin of Toronto president along with vice-presidents Jim Minards of St. Catharines, Ont.; Tom Croston of Toronto, and Jack Carver of Vancouver. Treasurer is Ted Norris of Toronto.

Allan Price of Montreal was named full-time executive director and will move to Ottawa to establish his office early in 1971.

Developers Hope to Lure Yanks, Giants

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Hackensack Meadowlands Development Commission is seriously considering plans to construct separate domed football and baseball stadiums to lure the New York Yankee baseball team and the football Giants to New Jersey, the New York Times reports.

The newspaper reports that sources on the commission said a sports centre would be among the first projects to be considered.

The sources said officials from both the Yankees and the Giants have been given a first-hand look at the proposed site in East Rutherford, north of a proposed shopping centre at Berry's Creek, near New Jersey Highway 3.

The report stated that the commission envisages floating bonds to build the sports arenas. It would run the facilities itself. Michael Burke, president of the Yankees, said he had no knowledge of any offer to his team.

Sandy's Total Reaches 433

TORONTO — Jockey Sandy Hawley continued his hot riding hand Tuesday, guiding three winners home at Woodbine racetrack to bring his number of wins this season to 433.

The record for the number of wins in a season is held by Willie Shoemaker, who had 485 winners.

Hawley took both ends of the Daily Double, the first and second races, which paid $15.00, and was aboard the winner of the sixth race.

VIKING VIEWS

By Mark Hume

University of Victoria hockey Vikings will probably require a big portion of playing skill and an even larger amount of hustle if they want to make this a winning weekend.

Uvic plays host to the hot UBC Thunderbirds twice this weekend.

They meet the T'birds first on Saturday afternoon at 1:30 in the Esquimalt Sports Arena. The teams clash again Sunday at 2:15 p.m.

Friday night at 8 the Vikings will be taking on Stockers in a Vancouver Island League game.

One can't help wondering what makes the Vikings think they are strong enough to compete in two leagues at the same time. Especially when it means playing games back to back, as it will this weekend.

Could it be that they think so little of their opposition in the Island league? That hardly seems likely, as they've been beaten several times this season. Or is it that they feel this year in the WCIAA league will be as hopeless as last season.

Last season the Vikings failed to win one of their 13 games, and perhaps were thinking of making only a token showing in the WCIAA again this year.

This season they've already beaten their previous record — they did so by winning their opener last week — and have a much stronger squad than last year.

It seems that the Vikings could be a tough competitor in either league, but should decide which league is more important, and compete only in that one.

Uvic's varsity hockey lacks both the depth and strength in playing experience to be able to play in two — and both of them tough — leagues.

★ ★ ★

The senior basketball squad is off to a solid start in the intercollegiate division, with two wins recorded in their recent road trip.

Vikings played three times in four days, and were travelling — always a wearing experience on an athlete — in between.

The Vikings strong showing comes as a surprise, as they didn't look too impressive in pre-season activities.

During one practice game several weeks ago the junior basketball squad actually defeated the Vikings.

That must have given Bob Bell, athletics director and coach at Uvic, some second thoughts about the superiority of his first team. In past weeks the Vikings have come on, however, and are now starting to weld into a strong club.

Vikings meet UBC's senior squad, always a powerful, fast-moving team, at UBC twice this weekend. The clubs clash on Friday and Saturday nights at 8.

At home, the men's junior basketball team, the Jaycees, will see action against Mt. Vernon.

★ ★ ★

Vikettes, Uvic's varsity women's club, will travel out of town to see their first action this season in the WCIAA league.

Friday and Saturday they'll be in Regina for two games with the southern half of the University of Saskatchewan. On the following Monday and Tuesday they'll be in Saskatoon for a pair of games with the northern division.

The cold snap last weekend made things rough for teams that play outside.

The weather was tough on everyone, but the rugby players had it worst of all. Frozen ground was hard to run on, and even harder to fall on.

In the Viking-Nanaimo match, Sunday, many of the Uvic players were wearing sweat pants for warmth and a little added protection.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE
DRIVE

DRIVE
OK

says Mrs. K. Tippett of St. Vital, Manitoba.

We gave Mrs. Tippett an advanced pack of new lower phosphate DRIVE, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I liked the idea of a really good detergent and a stain remover working together. So I used DRIVE. Now that I have tried the new lower phosphate formula, I shall go on using it. It doesn't seem to have changed DRIVE's ability to give me a clean stain-free wash, and that's all I want."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining DRIVE's high quality performance.

Unitas Is Sure He'll Have Job

BALTIMORE (AP) — Quarterback Johnny Unitas confirmed Tuesday he has signed a three-year playing contract with the Baltimore Colts that guarantees him an additional 10 years of employment in the National Football League club's front office.

The 37-year-old Unitas, who holds many of the National Football league passing records, is believed to have signed for more then the $100,000-plus he received annually under the three-year pact which ended with the 1969 season.

The contract does not spell out how Unitas would be employed after his playing career ends, but he said he was "willing to learn the business from the bottom up."

Unitas said the new contract does not include any deferred payment clauses. "It just guarantees me a job," he said.

Now in his 15th season, Unitas has been named the most valuable player in the NFL three times. His records include 277 touchdown passes.

In a poll commemorating the NFL's 50th anniversary last year, Unitas was selected as the greatest quarterback of all time.

Hoop Leaders Add to Riches

The rich get richer and the poor get mangled in the National Basketball Association.

Three of the four divisional leaders—New York, Baltimore and Milwaukee—increased or maintained their margins over the rest of the packs Tuesday night.

The New York Knicks withstood a pro career-high 40 points by Atlanta's million-dollar rookie, Pete Maravich, and turned back the Hawks 128-119.

Baltimore's Bullets equalled a team scoring record by crushing Portland Blazers 156-104 and Lew Alcindor canned 37 points as Milwaukee's rampaging Bucks bounced Chicago Bulls 117-108 for their 15th successive victory.

In other NBA games, Detroit Pistons whipped San Diego Rockets 111-104, San Francisco Warriors clipped Philadelphia 76ers 104-96 and Buffalo Braves flipped Phoenix Suns 112-106.

In Baltimore it was all over by halftime when the Bullets led 84-50.

'South Pacific' Profitable But Artistically Weak

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In its 25-year history Victoria Operatic Society has brought us many thoroughly enjoyable adroitly presented evenings in the musical theatre.

To jot them down from recall would make quite an imposing list.

Unfortunately South Pacific, judged from the standpoint of these best productions, is not destined to be one of them.

It so happens that the show's run is virtually sold out in advance with the exception of Saturday's matinee, so financially, at least, VOS can chalk up another success.

But artistically, no way.

It is customary, critically speaking, to attribute flaws to first-night tensions. But the things that are wrong with South Pacific — with the exception of some shaky orchestral episodes — are unlikely to be mended in subsequent performances.

Tuesday's opening at McPherson Playhouse revealed stage direction so stilted, so devoid of pace, rhythm, continuity and invention, that there is no way in which it could ne improved by repetition.

TWO EPISODES

To make the best of the situation, let me say immediately that two episodes, while not revealing anything out of the ordinary choreographically, came to life. These were Nellie's Gonna Wash that Man Right Outa My Hair and the Thanksgiving show scene.

In both instances the lift was provided mainly by Janet Senior, who managed to pull Nellie, momentarily, out of the slough in which she was trapped for most of the evening.

For the rest, from the opening Dites-Moi, which should have been charming, all the actors suffered alike from Walter Burgess's emotionally barren direction.

The writers obviously intended the show to open in a warm rosette glow of romance, but this South Pacific opens in a cold blue fog exhaled by two rigidly blocked actors who are obviously unhappy in the situation.

HUMAN BEINGS

South Pacific is about real human beings in a real situation. It is rich with emotional currents, rough humor, sensitivities. As such it requires acting of much greater depth and quality than the majority of musicals demand.

But actors consistently directed to play in profile or upstage and in a lifeless formality of position and movement, can communicate little if they are indeed feeling anything.

One of the results of this was a muffling of the voices, both in singing and speaking. This was particularly marked in the case of Garth Hislason in the role of Emile de Becque.

There was every indication that here was a fine rich-timbered voice but one got little opportunity to appreciate the fact.

QUITE FUNNY

Eric Roberts managed to be broad, convincing and quite funny in spite of everything, as Luther Billis, leading the routinely conceived Nothing Like a Dame chorus.

Probably the star performance of the evening is provided by the lovely, graceful hands of Elizabeth Andrews in the Happy Talk number.

Howard Denike, leading the orchestra, did his best but even he and Rodgers' music could not overcome the stage dullness.

Police Court

An RCMP constable told Judge William Ostler in Victoria Provincial Court Tuesday he faked smoking from a pipe during a hashish party last July in Beacon Hill Park while conducting an investigation.

Const. William Edward Hill was testifying against Timothy A. Thornley, 20, of 1843 Island Highway, charged with trafficking in cannibis resin, or hashish. Thornley elected to be tried by a magistrate and pleaded guilty Tuesday.

He was one of 30 persons arrested Nov. 17 in the Greater Victoria area and charged with drug offences following a three-month undercover investigation by police.

Hill said on July 21 while in an undercover capacity for the RCMP he went to the Churchill Hotel and sat drinking with the accused and an friend.

After about 15 minutes, he said, Thornley asked him if he wanted to go and "blow" some hash and he said he would.

They left the hotel, got into a car and drove to Beacon Hill Park.

On the way, Hill said, some hashish and a pipe were produced and passed around the car.

When they arrived at the park they got out of the car and the pipe was passed around several times, Hill said. It was handed around once again when the occupants got back into the vehicle.

Hill said he asked Thornley what kind of hash it was and the accused had said it was "Khif".

He said he then asked the accused if he had any extra and Thornley had indicated that he had $5.

The policeman said he bought $5 worth from Thornley.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson asked Hill what he did each time the pipe was passed to him during the episode last July.

FAKED SMOKING

"I faked smoking," he said and the packed courtoom, largely young people, groaned loudly.

Ostler said nothing of the response of the crowd but earlier during other cases said he would clear the courtroom if an outburst occurred.

The judge remanded Thornley to Dec. 4 for a presentence report and sentence.

Before doing so, he asked the accused if he wished to ask Hill any questions but Thornley declined.

Port Hardy Hearing May Continue

The provincial pollution control board will decide whether the Dec. 2 mine effluent dumping hearing at Port Hardy should be continued later at another location.

Pollution control director W. N. Venables said Tuesday the hearing would go ahead as planned Dec. 2 at the northern Vancouver Island community into plans of Utah Mining and Construction Ltd. to dump 9.3 million gallons daily into Rupert Inlet.

But the hearing would be "open-ended" with further direction awaited from the pollution control board on whether to continue the hearings elsewhere.

It was learned there have been appeals against the Port Hardy venue from persons wishing to appear at the hearings. Complaints about the difficulty of reaching the hearings were also aired earlier.

Mutual Fund Fee Returned By Cabinet

The provincial cabinet has refunded $315 in registration fees to International Mutual Fund Ltd., a Vancouver firm currently under investigation by the provincial securities commission.

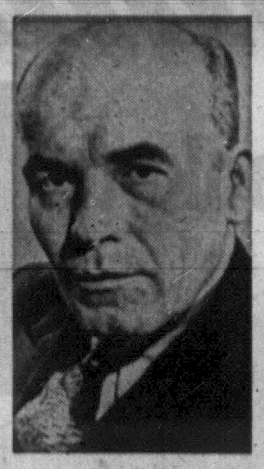

The cabinet order approving the refund says the money was paid this year for registration of nine salesmen but the registrations were not carried through "because of the failure of International Mutual Fund Ltd. to comply with the provisions of the Securities Act, 1967."

An official of the attorney-general department said the refund had nothing to do with the investigation, which was ordered earlier this year into several companies in which Vancouver lawyer Harold Hine is a director. Hie is a brother-in-law of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

Local Park Men Chosen Officers

A. E. (Bert) Richman, parks administrator for Saanich, was elected president of the International Northwest Parks and Recreation Association at its recent conference.

Coal Pipeline Conditions Stringent

A $200 million solids pipeline to ship slurry coal to Roberts Bank Superport from the East Kootenay would have to meet several conditions before getting provincial approval.

Mines Minister Frank Richter, commenting on a meeting scheduled today between Shellpac Ltd., pipeline promoters, and regional district representatives in the lower mainland, said the conditions include:

Approval of the route by the districts the pipeline would traverse;

Acceptable pollution control standards;

Proof that Japanese customers would accept the coal in slurry form;

And assurances that coal traffic currently being carried by unit trains would not be affected.

Treaty With Bonn 'A Turning Point'

BUDAPEST (WP) — Polish leader Wladyslaw Gomulka, in his first public utterance on the recently concluded border treaty with West Germany described the agreement Tuesday as a "turning point" in the post-war history of Europe.

"We want the 25 years of history marked by the cold war . . . to be no more than a part of the irretrieveable past and never be reborn," the Polish official told delegates to the 10th Hungarian Communist Party Congress which was in its second day here.

Gomulka spoke after a morning address to the congress by Soviet party leader Leonid L. Brezhnev that reaffirmed the need for intensified solidarity of the Warsaw Pact states and gave a blessing to the Hundarian reform program.

However, on the German problem, and particularly on the question of recognition for East Germany, it was Gomulka rather than Brezhenev who made the stronger appeal for support for the regime of Walter Ulbricht in East Berlin.

Ulbricht himself has stayed away from the congress on alleged grounds of "doctor's orders." However sources here said Ulbricht was expected to travel to Bucharest early next week to sign a friendship treaty with Romania.

In his speech, Brezhnev said that the recently concluded agreements between Bonn, Warsaw and Moscow on normalizing relations and recognizing the status quo in Europe "protect the legitimate interests of the German Democratic Republic and other socialist states."

Gomulka, however, was more specific when he said that the pace of detente in central Europe "depends on the Federal Republic of Germany recognizing the German Democratic Republic as an equal subject under international law, and the two German states being admitted to the United Nations organizations."

MAYORS DIFFER IN REACTION

'NO SIGNIFICANT SAVINGS'

Report Urges Delay of Amalgamation Issue to 1973

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — Amalgamation of Duncan and North Cowichan should not be considered until 1973, a joint services study recommended.

The study, released Tuesday and conducted by Kates, Peate, Marwick and Co. under the authorization of both councils, said that by 1973 regional operation of the major facilities — water supply, sewage treatment and garbage disposal — should have settled down and be working satisfactorily.

The planners explained that "no abrubt change is required in the tax load on the residents of the two communities nor are additional costs required for the operation of the routine services.

"For those who may have hoped for savings from some form of amalgamation, we see no major significant savings whatever form of joint service arrangement might be adopted."

The report, that still has to be considered by both councils before it is implemented, recommends regional administration in planning, water (sources and main trunks), sewage disposal treatment plants and main trunks, garbage disposal (incinerators or disposal sites), a public safety building for receipt of calls and dispatch warnings, public housing, a public health unit building, parks and recreation, and assessment.

Recommendations included under joint service are water distribution, sewage collection system, and storm sewer systems.

Although North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith described the study as "a good job" Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife said it is a "disappointing report which did not tell us anything we didn't know.

Quaife said the report contains "a wealth of information for the general public."

"We should try joint services for a while before we think of amalgamation. We don't know yet, for instance, how far the regional district will go as far as administration is concerned," said Smith.

"I think it would be good if the regional district would take over some of the things because it would save money."

Meanwhile, Les Atchison, president of the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, who, since mid-October, has approached both councils and three ratepayers' associations with a request that a public opinion poll on amalgamation be held with the civic elections, argues consideration of amalgamation should not be put off until 1973.

When approached with the request, ratepayers and councils advised Atchison before any decisions are reached the joint services study would have to be made public.

"If the report contains 'a wealth of information for the general public,' as Mayor Quaife put it, why then should councils charge $10 for a copy of the report," Atchison questioned.

"Taxpayers already paid $9,200 for the study."

Atchison said, "I feel the way to amalgamation must be with the enthusiastic cooperation of both councils and administrations and many joint problems could be amicably settled if a report, like the recently tabled report on joint services, was prepared by a committee of the two clerks and councils.

"This would be a saving to taxpayers if the reports which are currently received are not telling anything which is not already known."

The study also recommended regular joint council meetings.

Rural Romantic's Idea of Freedom Called False by Pro-Planner

DUNCAN — Planned development in the Cowichan Bay and Cobble Hill areas would help rather than cramp the freedom of the individual, Ken McKinnin, vice-chairman of the Cowichan Valley regional board, argued Tuesday.

He was replying to a Cobble Hill resident's complaint that residents of the unorganized area were being asked to "virtually give up the blessed freedom of rural existence which they sought when they chose to live in the area."

This is a false concept of freedom, replied McKinnon in defending a proposed bylaw which will deal with zoning, subdivision and development control.

"Often others impose their own idea of freedom to the detriment of their neighbors. Now we still have the chance to guide the development of the area.

'BAD THINGS'

"We try to preserve the present values and environment. The philosophy of planning today is to stop the bad things that are happening and to give us breathing space to get more sophisticated control if necessary, but perhaps the present proposal is adequate for a number of years."

McKinnon noted that the mass of the area would be rural residential with the exception of existing commercial firms and small industrial areas at Cobble Hill and Cowichan Bay.

Included in the list of banned enterprises in the rural residential area are saw-milling, fish canneries, pulp and paper mills, thermal power plants, mineral concentrate plants, asphalt-drying concrete manufacture, construction equipment storage, junk and salvage yards, and used car equipment yards.

Residential areas in the Cowichan Bay and Cobble Hill areas centre around both villages and commercial marine zoning is proposed for Cowichan Bay waterfront.

McKinnon said it was hoped that first readings of the bylaw could be given at the board's December meeting.

Second Car Sought In Man's Death

DUNCAN — RCMP are searching for a second vehicle which struck 26-year-old Ernest Peter Bob, who was killed here early Sunday while walking across the Trans-Canada Highway.

Police said the Mill Bay man was hit into the northbound lane by a vehicle driven by Robert Raynor, 24, of Cobble Hill, travelling south.

The RCMP said Raynor tried to flag down the oncoming car in the northbound lane before it hit the body but it did not stop and continued on.

"We have no information about the second vehicle except it was a car," said the RCMP.

An inquest will be held 7:30 p.m. Dec. 15.

Bus Stop Safety At Schools Urged

DUNCAN — Adequate bus stop supervision should be immediately established at all area schools, it was recommended here Monday after a junior secondary student was nearly run down by a bus in the school pickup zone.

The recommendation was made by the transportation committee of the Cowichan District school board. The board referred it to its education committee.

The student, when the bus stopped, was between the front of the bus and the front wheels.

Jolted Man Recovering

Lloyd Dunbar, 51, Bamberton Road, Cobble Hill, was in fairly good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital today, one week after he suffered a heart attack and collapsed at a Victoria shopping centre.

Dunbar's heart stopped during the ambulance trip to the hospital.

Over the next 18 hours he received 175 defibrillations — electrical jolts sent through the chest to stimulate the heart's pacemaker, and keep the heart beating.

How Lovely It Must Be To Live in a Price War Zone

While Victoria's meat prices leave housewives frozen in horror as stiff as New Zealand lamb, Toronto shoppers are taking advantage of a price war to stock their freezers with prime ribs of beef at 76 cents a pound.

The happy Toronto non-combatants are cleaning up during the price war raging between Loblaws, Dominion, Steinberg's and A and P — all giants of the eastern retail-grocery trade.

The result has been a cut in retail prices of 10-15 per cent with a rise in sales of 30-40 per cent.

The president of the Retail Council of Canada, A. J. McKichan, said that "the price war may last a long time. I mean years instead of months."

Meantime, as "the rich get richer," B.C. housewives must continue to shop around trying to save pennies where they can.

To help in the time consuming struggle needed to save the price of a new lipstick out of the housekeeping money, the Time's Women's Department checked prices in several Victoria stores.

Victoria prices quoted are the average for Monday, Nov. 23, and to turn the knife in the wound, are compared with Toronto prices for Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Madrigals At Maltwood For Bazaar

Guests at the Martlet Chapter, IODE, bazaar will have the opportunity to experience an Elizabethan Christmas when they enter Maltwood Museum, 4509 W. Saanich Rd., Monday.

The Great Hall will be decked with evergreens and holly, and carollers, from Claremont Secondary School Choir, in the Ministrels' gallery will sing traditional madrigals.

The bazaar opens at 11 a.m. and will feature festive delicacies like English brawn and rich lemon butter made from old family recipes.

Two cooks from the Martlet Chapter, which is noted for its gourmet food stall, have given their recipes.

Oxford Brawn, a very old family favorite, is made with two fresh pork hocks and two pounds shin of beef.

Scrub and wash and dry hocks very well. Put beef and hocks in pan and cover with cold water. Simmer gently for three hours or until meat falls from bones. Remove meat from bones. Reserve liquid.

Put meat through fine blade of mincer. Add one tablespoon salt to liquid, some pepper and two tablespoons ground nutmeg. (Yes, two tablespoons is right.)

Liquid must be thick. Add two envelopes gelatine softened in a little cold water.

Oil a mold slightly. Add meat to liquid and pour into mold. Refrigerate until set.

Also on sale will be jars of rich lemon butter, made from a recipe found in a cook book put out in 1937 by the Dr. O. M. Jones Chapter, IODE. (The chapter was disbanded some years ago.)

Ingredients are one cup of sugar, two lemons, a quarter of a cup of butter and three eggs.

Use the juice of the two lemons and the grated rind of one. Mix ingredients together and cook in double boiler until mixture is as thick as honey. Put in jars and tie down when it is cold.

This is used for filling tarts, or on sandwiches with grated cheese.

The recipe was submitted to the book by Mrs. J. D. Phillimore, then residing at 2955 Cedar Hill Road.

Credit Buyers Can Misjudge Their Ability to Pay Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — In spite of its advantages, consumer credit must be used wisely, the federal consumer affairs department cautions in a handbook called Consumer Credit.

The booklet says that perhaps the most dangerous pitfall in consumer credit is "the mistaken belief that credit is an increase in total income."

If a person commits too much of his income to credit payments, any unexpected reduction of income, caused for example by illness, could be disastrous.

"Consumers also frequently overlook the fact that consumer credit is expensive and may increase the price of the goods or services by anything from 10 to 30 per cent, and even more," the handbook says.

It points out that basically there are two kinds of credit: cash loans, and sales or purchase credit which involve the sale of goods or services on some kind of time-payment plan.

The handbook says that borrowers should shop for credit as carefully as they would for any other purchase and consider the following points:

● Consider the entire transaction before making any commitment. Ask yourself whether the purchase is important enough now to justify the cost of credit and whether it will give lasting satisfaction.

● Know the cost of credit and any additional charges that may be made, such as insurance, delivery or installation costs.

● Compare alternate credit plans.

"Finance charges vary widely depending upon the credit rating of the applicant, the nature of the goods, the term over which the credit is to be repaid, and the security to be provided. It may often be cheaper to borrow elsewhere and pay cash to the retailer."

● Use only the amount of credit needed. Remember to allow some leeway for emergencies.

● Keep the payment period as short as possible. Make payments promptly to avoid additional charges. Advise your creditor if your payment will be late.

● Make the largest down payment possible.

A borrower may also achieve considerable savings in credit costs by paying off his debt early. Most provincial legislation provides that if a loan is repaid earlier than the contract requires, the customer is entitled to a proportionate refund of the cost of borrowing.

● If verbal warranties, or other representations are made to you, make sure they appear in the agreement, since otherwise they may not be binding on the seller.

● It is dangerous to sign a promissory note — a promise in writing to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a certain sum of money to a specified person or the bearer — unless you are completely satisfied with the quality of the goods before signing.

If you are having work done in your home, do not sign a so-called "completion certificate" unless the work has in fact been completed to your satisfaction.

Proceeds will be used to benefit the hospital.

Barmaid Chooses Wines

COVENTRY, England (UPI) — Barmaid Margaret Baker, 20, who advertised for a husband because she wants to have her own pub, has closed the applications. She has settled on a man.

He is Peter Wines, 20, whom she said she found acceptable after three "suitability meetings."

Wines, son of a Leicestershire pub owner, spotted Margaret's ad in a liquor trade journal. She said her life's ambition was to run a pub and brewers will accept only married couples.

Fashions Pushed in Rags Aren't Just for the Rich

By DUSTON HARVEY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It's called Rags. It's the nearest thing to an underground fashion magazine. It breaks the standard rules right and left in advice on dress, summing up in essence with a wear-your-own-thing preachment.

"Everybody has an idea how or she looks best," said publisher Baron Wolman. "We try to support them in it."

In its first issues, the Rags support included:

● "On the street" pictures, ranging from a girl with a shaved head wearing a bright warm gym suit to a long-haired lass in a maxi-skirt created from men's ties;

● "How to" tips on tie-dying, beer-can-pull-tab vests and removable tattoos;

● Shopping hints, with an emphasis on surplus and second-hand stores, crafts and specific items like the "Hopalong Cassidy T-shirt";

● Consumer-oriented "road tests" of various brands of jeans;

● Views of such contemporary fashion "critics" as hard-hat construction workers;

● Iconoclastic looks at the corset and brassiere council and other aspects of the fashion industry;

● And, finally, fulminations against "fashion fascism"—the general idea of "in" styles and the current campaign for the midi.

"We have nothing against the midi," Wolman said during an interview at his poster and picture-filled office in a hard-to-find corner of the plant where the magazine is printed. "If someone thinks it's her style, she should wear it.

"What we are arguing against are the social rules that certain styles or fashions are 'in' and that you have to wear them to be 'in.' The whole idea of beautiful people is an insult.

"For us, everybody is beautiful. We think everyone has enough that's special in them which can be displayed imaginatively and creatively in their clothes. We want the individual to be proud of himself rather than fitting a stereotype."

Wolman is a freelance photographer. He was wearing a tan safari jacket, $2 blue work shirt, $10 brown wash pants and two-year-old cowboy boots.

"Individuality" in clothing often means the weird, bizarre or eccentric and that's all to the good, he said.

Regular features now include "Supermarket," places and things to buy; "Drugstore," consumer advice on various products; "Dr. Eatgood," health foods; "Signs," an astrology column; "Media Massages," a look at the opposition, and "Common Cents," business advice for young entrepreneurs.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Unable to Love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is there any way a married couple can get rid of a three-week-old baby girl legally. We have a six-year-old daughter and we wanted a baby boy so bad we prayed for one. I even used the alkaline-acidity method which was supposed to insure us positively of getting a boy, but had a girl instead. All during my pregnancy I watched my diet and did all the things the doctor told me to do so I would have a healthy son, and when I had this baby girl I felt so betrayed and cheated.

I hate her. I do her laundry, and feed her, and keep her clean because she didn't ask to be born and that is the least I can do for her, but I will never love her.

I guess she knows she's not wanted. She screams every minute. If I am lucky, she may scream so hard she will choke herself to death.

I considered doing away with myself, but my six-year-old needs me. I also considered doing away with this baby, but I don't want to go to jail. My husband blames me for getting pregnant, but I was so sure I would have a boy. Don't tell me that I will learn to love this baby. The only way I will love her is if she is gone.

I am 27 and my husband is 35. He deserves some kind of sex life, but I just can't accommodate him knowing I might have another girl. Does this make any sense to you at all. Please tell me what to do.—Unhappy in South Carolina.

DEAR UNHAPPY: Since your husband shares your feelings about the baby, together you should go to your doctor and tell him exactly what you have told me.

He will help you place your baby in a home where it will be loved and wanted. I urge you not to wait another day. And please write to me again and let me know the outcome.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 15 years old and she wants to quit school and get married. She is a good student and has another three years to go before she graduates, but she insists she doesn't need a high school diploma. The fellow is a nice enough kid, but he's not 21 yet and he is going to be out of the country for a year.

I also try to point out to my daughter the number of teen-age marriages that break up, but she says that won't happen to them.

I wish that girl of mine would stay in school. I never got a high school diploma and it has held me back all my life. When I try to tell her this, it goes in one ear and out the other.

Maybe you can explain it better to her than I can. Please try. Thanking you, I remain.—Her Father.

DEAR FATHER: You've explained it very well, but if you want me to second the motion, I say, "Heaven can wait. Graduate!"

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the gentleman who didn't tip the strolling musicians in a restaurant, may I add a few words to NO PATSY, who defended the man's not tipping.

When I go out with a man for the first time, I can't help but notice what kind of a tipper he is. I store this information with the rest of my impressions of the man.

This one clue to the man's generosity (or lack of it) doesn't necessarily keep me from enjoying the man or becoming further involved with thim, but I will say this: In dating well over 100 men since my divorce, I have observed that every man who has been cheap about tipping has expected more from others (especially his women) than he has been willing to give of himself.—ME in Camden, N.J.

CONFIDENTIAL TO PABLO IN ALBUQUERQUE: Anyone who opens doors with his elbows and closes them with him, but I will say this: fears contamination from doorknobs is (to use your phrase) "off his rocker."

sew simple

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

I am a beginner when it comes to sewing and have just learned the virtues of using a zipper foot to insert the lapped type zipper. Now I'm wondering why I can't use the zipper foot for all of my sewing.—Mrs. R.E.W.

Dear Mrs. R.E.W.:

The zipper foot is only half of the regular presser foot width so that it can be used very close to the zipper or cording, whereas the regular presser foot would prevent this close stitching. However, the regular presser foot controls the fabric much better since there is a part of the metal foot riding on each side of your actual machine stitching. I would only use the zipper or cording foot in the specific techniques for which it was designed.

While we're on the subject of zippers, I would like to go into the nylon invisible zippers a little more thoroughly since I have received so very many letters asking for more information about them.

Many women resist them naturally, remembering when they weren't heat resistant and they had to replace many of the old zippers that were used in cottons that needed a hot iron. Today, nylon has been perfected to the point that it will withstand the same heat that is used for pressing on cottons without any disastrous effects. If the length of the zipper is not the length you prefer, whip-stitch over the closed coil one-half inch below the desired zipper length. Cut off the excess zipper about one half inch below your whip-stitching.

The nylon zippers can be machine washed, or dry cleaned and tumble dried. They won't rust or corrode. It's best to close the zipper before washing, dry cleaning or pressing. Use a press cloth when ironing or pressing at temperatures higher than the ordinary cotton setting. Should the zipper become curled after washing and drying, simply steam press the zipper flat again.

Some fabrics such as polyesters have less than a 1 per cent shrinkage. It is recommended that you preshrink your zipper before applying. This is done by immersing the zipper in hot tap water for a few minutes. Roll in a towel to absorb moisture. Air dry and press lightly, ease zipper tape slightly when applying.

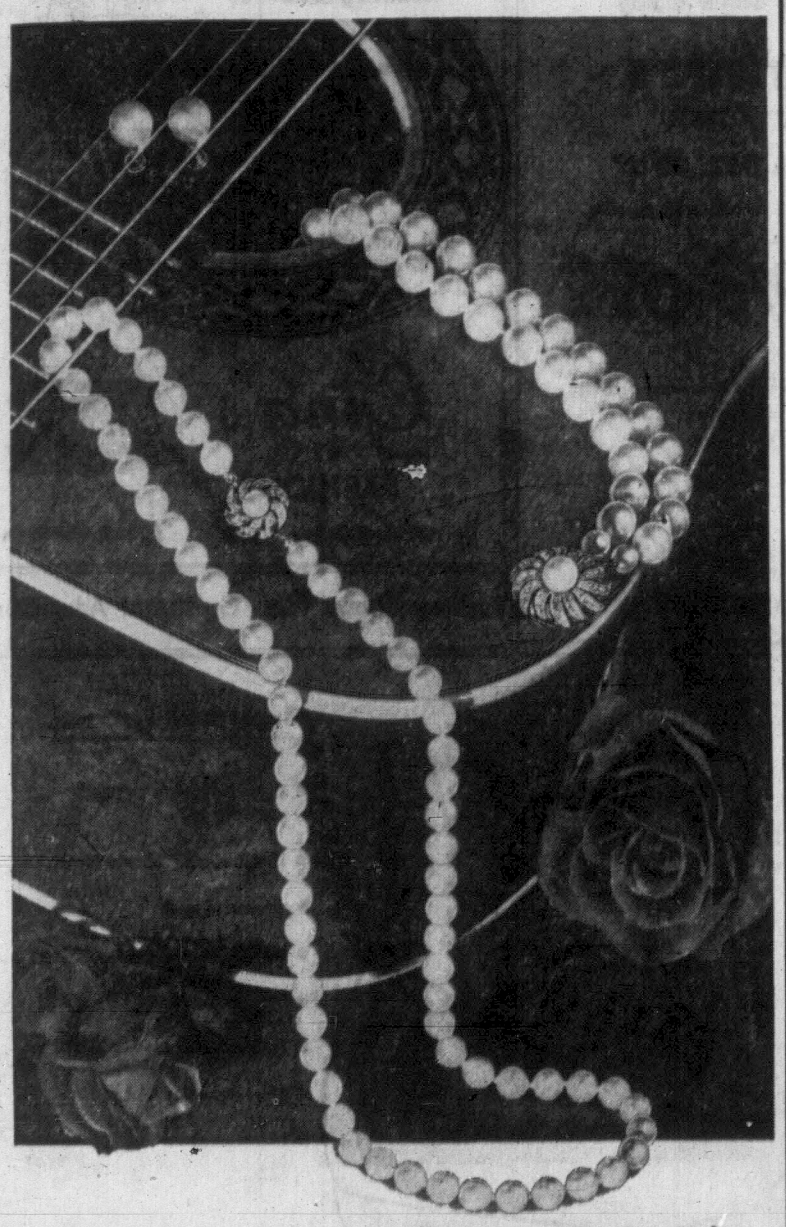

Should zipper become hard running after washing or dry cleanings, lubricate the coil edges by rubbing with beeswax, soap or with a commercial zipper ease product.

If you don't care for the metal tab of the zipper, you may cover it with your fabric or remove the tab and add your own decorative drop or jewel for a fashion accent.

A Business—Built on Customer Confidence and Goodwill

Bryan Davies shuffles his schedule at Trent University so he can work full tine at a day care centre. Here he gives three-year-old Jimmy Brown tips on hammering while sister Gail, five, waits her turn. (CP Photo)

Little Boys Long to Grow Beards So They Can Look Like Teacher

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — When a youngster at the Lester B. Pearson day nursery drew a picture of Bryan Davies showing him with a bosom and a skirt, Davies wasn't surprised.

As a male working in a day care centre he expected there would be some confusion in the children's minds at first.

"Children learn the stereotyped image of teacher as woman and at first it was very strange for them," he said. "The children used to say 'Miss' instead of teacher; now they say our names."

Bryan said the children seem to be adjusting well to their male teacher. Several little boys have been trying to grow beards "just like Bryan's."

The 21-year-old student first began working at the nursery last February, after dropping two subjects from his Trent University curriculum because he wanted to apply what he was learning in educational psychology immediately.

WORKED FOR DOLLAR

He worked as a full-time volunteer for a dollar a day until June, when he was invited to become a full staff member. This year he is taking three more courses at Trent University, but has arranged his schedule so that classes fall in the evenings or during rest hour at the nursery.

"I'm not really a teacher," said Bryan. "I'm more like a guide."

He explained that he tries to avoid fitting into traditional male roles, those of father-figure and authoritarian. He prefers the role of male friend.

"A child can't use an encyclopedia, so the function of day care teachers is to provide answers to his questions in language and concepts the child understands," said Bryan. "A parent often has too many other worries to pay attention to the child's incessant questions. Sometimes a question can be the last straw."

Bryan became interested in day care because he felt it would be challenging to work with children.

"These young ones are open and honest and easy to reach. They're uninhibited and eager to learn."

PUTS DOWN MYTHS

Bryan said the most rewarding aspect of his work is being able to establish friendship with a child.

"It's a myth that women make better teachers of young children, just as it's a myth that day care is babysitting. I think it's very important that young children have a male influence at school too."

He said many of his friends have begun to work with small children through the Trent University Community Action program.

"Many men say it's the money that keeps them out of day care, but I don't think that's a valid complaint. I have plenty to live on and I'm learning a lot. Sometimes you have to make a decision between job satisfaction and money.

"The women teaching at the day nursery have made it the most natural thing in the world that I should work there, and they've been very patient with my divided schedule."

Bryan said he will continue working at the day nursery until he finishes his third year at Trent. Then he hopes to attend the Institute of Child Study in Toronto to upgrade his qualifications in early childhood education.

Sesame Street Passes Tests

NEW YORK (AP) — The TV show Sesame Street has shown that television can be used effectively to teach three-to-five-year-old children simple facts and skills, says Educational Testing Service.

The service said that results of its testing 943 children showed a gain in learning by all who watched the show, but the highest gains were made by those who watched most often.

The study also found that disadvantaged children who watched frequently made more gains than advantaged children who watched less regularly.

The authors, Dr. Samuel Bail and Mrs. Gerry Bogatz, said this finding meant the educational gap between advantaged and disadvantaged children could be reduced "even by the time they enter first grade."

The study also found that three-year-olds who were regular viewers had learned more by the end of their series than older children who watched less frequently.

Sesame Street, produced by the Children's Television Workshop and financed by public and private agencies, is an hour-long program for pre-school children on public television stations.

The ETS survey was conducted in Boston, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Ariz., Durham, N.C., and a rural area of California. Children were tested before the program went on the air and after it had been on for 26 weeks.

Learning to Turn Off Tears Main Problem for Men Teachers

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Four young men have been assigned to teaching kindergarten with a view to providing the five-year-olds with a male image in their first learning experience.

So far the reaction from administrators, children, parents and the four teachers has been favorable.

The program's two objectives are to provide a male image for the children, an image lacking in many homes, and, in one of the classes, to give boys a chance to catch up to the faster-maturing girls.

BOTH SIDES ADJUST

"At first I didn't quite know how to handle crying kids or those who wet their pants," said Larry Kapchinsky, 23. "But both the children and I are adjusting. The kids don't know kindergarten teachers are supposed to be women."

Herman Neuman, a teacher for nine years with four children of his own, has a class of 26 — all boys.

Five-year-old boys, he said, "tend to be either shy or rowdy rather than compete" with girls of their own age. To enable them to hold their own with girls at similar maturity levels, the separate class was organized.

"I try to do things with them that a father might do," Neuman said. "Like playing with them on the playground."

John Rodgers, 23, said he had established a good relationship with both parents and pupils.

"One thing the parents have told me is the children like me very much," he said.

All four men believe the first formative years are most important in children's education.

"If the child can be successful in school early, it will probably last throughout his life," said teacher Charles Walker, 29. "I want to give him a positive experience to carry on."

A few showers have persisted overnight in the south coast while a number of snowflurries have occurred in parts of the Interior though in general clearing has developed in all regions.

The main impetus of the cold air is now southeastward from the Yukon into Alberta but there will be enough push in B.C. to force the Arctic air across the south coast briefly. Temperatures dropped sharply in the Central and Northern Interior overnight with Prince George reporting 24 below at 4 a.m.

A developing weather system now into western Alaska is forecast to continue southeastward down the B.C. coast carrying cloud, rain and snow and milder temperatures.

Security Tightened

CALGARY (CP) — Security measures at the Calgary transit system have been improved and a tamper-proof fare box is being contemplated, a public hearing was told Tuesday. William Kuyt, assistant manager of the transit system, testified the 1971 capital budget will have provision for a fare box that jams when tampered with and has to be taken apart before re-use.

Committee Planned

EDMONTON (CP) — Education Minister Robert Clark has announced the government plans to establish a committee to examine foreign influence and control in Alberta's educational institutions. The committee will assess the extent to which foreign professionals are holding positions in provincial educational institutions and the problems associated with the use of foreign textbooks.

Cash Income Down

EDMONTON (CP) — Farmers in Alberta reached record levels in agricultural production in 1970 but their cash income will be down about 4 per cent from 1969, the department of agriculture's statistical branch reported. Cash income is expected to total slightly more than $700 million, down from 1969 despite record yields for oats, barley, rapeseed and flax.

Snow Chokes Roads

EDMONTON (CP) — Winds gusting to 35 miles an hour across central Alberta and Saskatchewan blasted newly-fallen snow across highways today as an Arctic storm front moved eastwards.

Police continued to advise motorists to stay off highways.

The storm, which left two to four inches of snow behind it, was followed by Arctic air which dropped temperatures to below zero in most areas. Grande Prairie reported 18 below early today.

Politician Dies

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ald. John Gurzon Harvey, who held office on Winnipeg city council longer than any alderman before him, has died at the age of 64.

The member of council for 26 years was rushed to hospital late Tuesday night by a fire department rescue unit and was dead on arrival. The rescue unit had been called to his home.

MLA Bounced

EDMONTON (CP) — Johann Ludwig, 38, dean of business administration at Alberta College defeated MLA Jack Horan for the provincial Social Credit riding of Jasper Place.

Horan, first elected to the legislature in 1963, polled 132 votes compared with Ludwig's 143.

The Jasper Place riding includes most of West Edmonton.

★ ★ ★

Tax Change Urged

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatchewan government will be asked by the Saskatoon and Regina City councils to amend the Municipal Act to allow direct taxation of universities in both cities, Mayor Sid Buckwold said Tuesday.

The University of Saskatchewan pays no property tax to either city and is answerable only to the provincial government.

Parents Protest

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — Nearly 150 parents appeared before the St. Boniface school board Tuesday night to protest what they term a "separatist and discriminatory" proposal to establish exclusively French and English-speaking schools in the city.

At the meeting parents repeated earlier claims that such a system would jeopardize good relations between various ethnic groups in the Greater Winnipeg municipality.

Trustee Gilles Guyot, chairman of the school board, told the delegation that no decision has yet been made on the proposal.

Appeals Encouraged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's social allowance appeal board plans to distribute pamphlets to welfare recipients informing them of their rights of appeal against decisions of provincial and municipal welfare bodies.

Social development minister Rene Toupin told a news conference Tuesday that the pamphlets — written in English, French, Cree Saulteaux and Sioux — are to be distributed through all provincial and municipal offices administering welfare.

He said even without the information program there has already been a marked increase in the number of appeals received by the social allowances appeal board. Some 160 appeals have been heard so far this year, compared to a total of only 143 appeals in the first nine years of the board's existence.

'People Centre' Ready to Lend Hand

By LISA BINSSE

MONTREAL (CP) — If you are down and out, or in some kind of trouble, call the People Centre.

That's what the centre is for.

On hand to help and never too busy to do so are 70 young volunteer staffers who come from a variety of backgrounds and range in age from 15 to 26.

Set up in October, 1969, by six university students, the People Centre is a non-profit telephone distress service financed by gifts and donations. Since opening, it has averaged between 900 and 1,000 calls a month.

Calls extend over a variety of topics including drugs, love problems, accommodations available in the city—sometimes for runaway or penniless callers—or lack of communication with parents.

However, the majority of calls are from lonely people looking for a friend. Some become "regulars."

When further help is needed callers are referred to someone who can give them professional advice—legal, medical or otherwise. But the centre does not like to think of itself as a referral service.

Its function is not to give solutions to problems but to lead the caller to see his own problem, whatever it may be, in perspective.

"Usually the callers have the solutions within their own mind," one staffer said. "We wind up being a sounding board for callers and they eventually come to a realistic appraisal of themselves."

"It's for young people by young people," Duncan Willmott, an adult adviser, said in an interview. "The staffers become a sounding board, a second conscience."

Mr. Willmott said the centre, now open from 6 p.m. to midnight seven days a week, will become a 24-hour service.

Adult advisers from all walks of life work closely with the staffers.

Together they chose new staffers who must be, above all, "human and stable." A network of sub-advisers is spread all over the city.

In an average night the centre receives 30 to 35 calls, lasting from 10 seconds to five hours, coming from people aged eight to 80.

Anonymity is an important aspect of the work at the centre. Only first names are used by staffers and by callers if they so desire.

The centre works on the premise that lack of identification will lead callers to be more open and uninhibited.

It also keeps away from the "white coat" approach and from any one philosophical leaning.

HELP AS FRIENDS

The hot-liners are not trained professional telephone counsellors in any respect. They are just ordinary young people who are interested in helping others as friends, on their free time.

Staffers-to-be, many of them students, others holding down jobs or some both, must undergo an interview in which the acceptance rate is one in six.

One-third of the staff is bilingual and soon it will be totally bilingual. New staff is being recruited all the time.

How has working at the People Centre affected the lives of the staffers?

"I think I've changed somewhat in attitudes," a staffer named Barry said. "I'm generally more understanding, more inclined to understand what's on a person's mind."

"This work gives us a lot of scope," Mike, another staffer, said.

"We have the opportunity to reach out and help others and our own problems become little difficulties."

For Barry the centre is a service that is really needed.

The staffers know what "giving a damn" means.

Bermuda to Organize Sea Pollution Conference

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — A meeting on oil pollution in Bermuda waters is being planned for January, and Canadian scientists who were involved in the Arrow incident are being invited to attend.

The Canadians are from the Bedford Institute in Dartmouth, N.S. The meeting is being planned by the Bermuda biological station. A co-operative program with the Bermuda station was one of the recommendations of "Operation Oil," the task force report on the Arrow incident when the tanker broke up off the Nova Scotia coast.

The problem of oil pollution in the oceans is one that has developed quickly, far faster than research into the subject. For this reason local scientists feel that a conference here with the Canadians would give practical knowledge on the subject.

The oil pollution problem here is different than that which occurred when the Arrow went aground. In that incident it was a case of a large amount of oil from one source. In the Atlantic around Bermuda it's a case of a small amount of oil from many different tankers.

One of the items on the conference agenda is the chemical identification of oil residues.

Bermuda is considered the ideal location for sampling programs to monitor changes in the oceanic environment and to provide mid-ocean reference values against which values off heavily populated coasts may be compared.

A spokesman at the biological station said discussions are continuing with the Canadian scientists about the meeting.

GUEST OUSTED FOR FOUL BEHAVIOR

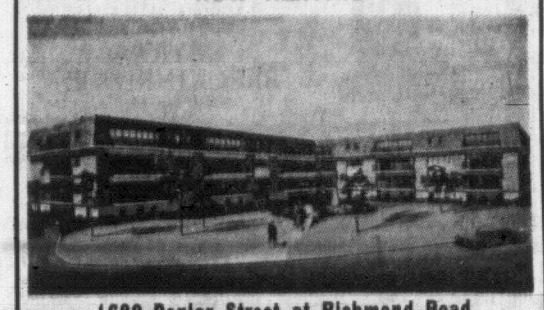

PETERBOROUGH, England (UPI) — The uninvited guest at formal dinners in the town hall had bad manners.

He made strange noises, swung on the chandeliers and gorged himself on leftovers. Sometimes he just went to sleep.

Officials finally had enough and called in the Royal Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which caught and ousted the large tawny owl living in the rafters.

How we grow the most delicious Delicious.

We grow the biggest, juiciest, most delicious Red Delicious apples because our trees are never underwatered or overwatered.

You see, we grow them in the Okanagan Valley. The Okanagan Valley gets only half as much rainfall as other fruit growing areas in Canada, so the growers irrigate their trees.

This means they can turn the water on whenever the trees need it. And they can turn the water off whenever the trees don't need it. Like we say, no underwatering, no overwatering.

So each apple sits there the whole summer long, soaking up that good Okanagan sunshine, and soaking up that pure, cool mountain water.

Nature, and our growers, nurse B.C. Red Delicious apples till they get as big and juicy as they can get.

Then we ship them to you.

And you eat them . . . and you love them!

B.C. Red Delicious Apples

UNUSUAL HAPPENINGS HAVE ARNESS TALKING

On Gunsmoke the Fight Scenes Are a No-No

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Matt Dillon hustles a burly drunk out of the Long Branch saloon. The drunk takes a swing at Matt, who cools the unfortunate with two swift blows, then orders him out of town.

"Cut! That's fine," says the director, and Matt—James Arness—ambles over for a chat. Two things are unusual: Arness giving an interview; a fight on Gunsmoke.

"That's the first fight we've had in a long time," said the television star, "and I suspect that the network will cut it out of the finished show."

Like all action series, Gunsmoke underwent a clampdown on violence in the wake of the Kennedy-King assassinations two years ago. Said Arness: "We have a little more freedom now, but not much. I can understand the reasons for cutting down on violence, but I must say it makes it dammed hard to film a western when you can't use fists or guns."

Despite the restrictions, Gunsmoke continues to flourish. On the day we met, the CBS series was No. 1 show in the Nielsen ratings.

That was one reason Jim Arness seemed happy. Another was that he was nearing the end of his 16th season as the marshal of Dodge City. He would soon be departing for other climes, as is his custom when not filming.

SHOW MAKES MONEY

A shy and retiring man despite his fame and wealth—Gunsmoke has made him a millionaire two or three times over—Arness rarely gives interviews.

How does he keep up his enthusiasm after 16 years in the same role?

"That's not hard to do. Sure, a lot of the work is routine, like walking in the saloon and saying, 'Hello, how are you,' and that sort of thing. But every now and then I get scripts that really make me stretch as an actor. That's where the fun is, that's how I keep alive."

Does the filming routine get him down?

"Not really. I spend a lot of time here, but the shows are planned so that only one out of every four are heavy with my scenes. The rest of the time, I'm in and out, and the others in the cast carry the load. So I get a couple of days off here and there. Then we get eight to 10 weeks off in the winter and eight to 10 weeks off in the summer."

PEOPLE WANT MORE

Why has Gunsmoke managed to hang on so many years—coming back stronger than ever after a brief cancellation in 1966?

"I've never really analysed it. Except that maybe the characters wear well. I think it's good that the stars are spread out on the shows; that leaves people wanting more, which is the best approach in show business."

How long can Gunsmoke continue?

"Gosh, I don't know. CBS hasn't told us yet that we're renewed for next year. You never can tell until you get the word. Sure, the ratings have been good, but that isn't the whole story any more. They have this thing about the nature of the audience — demographics, it's called. What's our demographics? I haven't the slightest idea."

What would he do if the series folded?

"I suppose I'd look for another job. Not right away. I wouldn't have to go right to work, because CBS has my payments spread over a period of time. I suppose I'd drop out for about six months and then look around. Maybe features. Or feature for television—that's getting to be a big field. And cassettes are going to be a big field, too. I imagine I could find something I could do."

It's Little Things That Rattle the Teacups in Oak Bay

By PAT DUFOUR

Candidates for the three seats on Oak Bay council in December should take warning.

It's not soaring taxes and assessments — or even high-rises — that put them in danger of stubbing their political toes. It's the smaller things that rattle Oak Bay teacups.

Restrict Bowser's freedom, lop a branch off a tree, make the slightest dint in a person's individuality — and the unwary politician is liable to be hurled clean through the Tweed Curtain.

RETREAT

Those who weather the political storms learn to compromise.

Dogs, for instance. A whole battalion of dog-lovers turned out in force this year when council wanted to stop dogs from using beaches in the summer months. It was a partial retreat — council voted to exclude them only from the highly-used Willows Beach.

Trees always stir up emotions.

Well-disciplined aldermen in Oak Bay have learned to order curbs built around trees when they interfere with road-widening. Cut down a tree? Never!

On Musgrave, when road-widening threatened the life of an ancient flowering plum tree it was laboriously raised, replanted on a nearby property and gently nurtured back to good health over a three-year period.

Developers are ordered to barricade their trees against the onslaught of bulldozers during the construction period.

DISMISSES MYTH

The payment of more than 100 welfare cheques this month dismisses the myth that all Oak Bay residents live well above the poverty line.

Many don't. Scores of retired people struggle to keep their homes and the individuality which sets Oak Bay apart. But rich, borderline or just barely-hanging-on, all Oak Bay residents rise up in arms against uncouth commercial dollars finding their way into their municipality.

Examples: Car wash establishments were banned in a bylaw passed this month. Council was taken to Supreme Court because of its determination to keep a major oil company from expanding its premises. It's now appealing the decision against it.

'REFINED'

Even when commercialism rears its head it still has to be refined.

When Oak Bay Marina operators were given a 30-year lease it was stipulated that down-to-earth functions like boat-building be modestly screened behind closed doors.

Sometimes, if council lags, residents take matters in their own hands in their determination to keep Oak Bay green.

Such a man was Thomas Lokier, who died in February, aged 101.

Alarmed that the corner of Estevan and Thompson might become the site of another service station when it was rejected for the locale of a war memorial, Lokier set to work.

He cleared off stones and rubbish, built cement walks and stepping stones, and planted roses, dahlias and other flowers, persuading some of his neighbors to help in the financing.

TRIBUTE

Today, Oak Bay workmen care for the plot, named Lokier Park, and a plaque bears tribute to one resident's persistence.

Newcomers to the municipality quickly absorb that special quality that stamps Oak Bay. And children learn fast.

This January Oak Bay added a Youth Council to its many groups. Most such groups concentrate on dances and other activities but these youngsters have other things on their mind.

Some of them were aired at a recent forum when they debated subjects ranging from loss of innocence, drugs and polarization to education and lack of leadership.

FRUSTRATION

Individual liberty can make public works planning in Oak Bay an exercise in frustration.

Transit Road is an example. Years ago, residents in the centre part of the street clamored for paving. They petitioned. Each end voted against the modernization. All three sections won their case!

Human liberties were never more hotly debated than over the controversial camper storage bylaw which, after two years of battle, was finally passed by council Monday.

At the public hearing in September tempers and voices rose as more than 130 residents declared their right to be masters of their manors and do what they pleased with their own front yards.

They've lost the first round but already ominous rumblings can be heard.

As one man said today: "I'm not going to spend $1,000 in legal fees to take them to court and then let them use my tax money to fight me back.

"But, there's always Dec. 12."

Extremism Rules In S. America

By The Associated Press

When Salvador Allende was sworn in as president of Chile in November, he became the first democratically-elected Marxist president in Latin America. The mantle of power passed from President Eduardo Frei's shoulders to those of Allende as smoothly as could be under a democratic system of government.

There was some initial question of whether or not Allende would be confirmed as president in a congressional runoff election after he gained only a plurality at the polls, but once he pledged to continue governing the country within the framework of the constitution, the barriers against him dropped.

And there is no question that there was violence in Chile in the wake of Allende's election — the army commander in chief was assassinated, allegedly by rightists seeking to block Allende's accession to power.

The jitters of American economic interest notwithstanding, however, it cannot be denied that the transition of Chile's government was orderly in comparison with the situation in many other Latin American countries.

Brazil, Latin America's largest nation with over 88 million people, was a democratically ruled republic until 1964, when the government was overthrown by the army. Since then, the regime — now headed by Gen. Emilio Garrastazu Medici — has emerged as one of the most repressive military dictatorships in the hemisphere.

Another rightist military dictatorship is Paraguay, the government of which is headed by Gen. Alfredo Stroessner. Stroessner assumed the presidency in 1954 and has been in power since, making him one of the most durable Latin American leaders.

Argentina's government was taken over by the military in 1966, and has been ruled since then by Gen. Juan Carlos Ongania. Congressional and gubernatorial elections were scheduled in 1967, but it became apparent that followers of previous President Juan Peron would gain too much power, and the elections were cancelled and all political parties and activities were suspended.

In Bolivia, the rightist military government of Gen. Alfredo Ovando Candia was ousted by Gen. Juan Jose Torres, who lost no time setting up a leftist military regime with himself as president.

Another Latin American country with a leftist military government is Peru, which has a long history of rule by the military and by civilian strongmen. The constitutionally elected government of President Fernando Balaunde Terry was overthrown by Gen. Juan Velasco in October of 1968, and no new date for an election has been set.

If establishment politics represent extremes in Latin America in many cases, so do opposition politics. Guerrilla and terrorist activity has been reported in Venezuela, Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Bolivia, Ecuador and Colombia.

Ky Claims Transformation to Dove

By CHARLMERS M. ROBERTS

WASHINGTON (WP) — South Vietnamese Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, the bete noir of war critics, Tuesday portrayed himself as "an ex-hawk turned dove" and a "comrade in arms" of Sen. J. William Fulbright.

•

The vice-president, attired in a brown suit and yellow shirt, spoke to a crowded National Press Club luncheon after breakfasting with President Nixon.

Whatever Ky's reasons for his self-portrait, what he had to say about his enemies in both South and North Vietnam and about the Paris peace talks offered no new route to a settlement of the Indo-China war.

In fact, he tied the conflicts in both Cambodia and Laos to the outcome in Vietnam and indicated he had made that point to Nixon.

Ky said that during his nearly three hours in the White House he had discussed "the overall situation" — military, political and economics — in South Vietnam and had "a little chat about the next presidential election in Vietnam" and about the Paris talks.

•

Ky had breakfasted in the White House family dining room with Nixon, Undersecretary of State John N. Irwin II, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State William Sullivan, White House foreign policy aide Henry A. Kissinger, John Holdridge, a Kissinger aide, and South Vietnamese Ambassador Bui Diem. Then he had what he termed a 90-minute "honest talk" with Kissinger.

The White House reception was low key, in part to avoid any appearance of backing Ky for the 1971 presidential race to which he alluded in his speech.

NINE PERSONS DIE IN CHICAGO FIRE

CHICAGO (AP) — Nine persons were killed and six injured early today in a fire that swept a three-storey apartment and restaurant building. Three of the dead were children.

Most of the damage, estimated by fire officials at $50,000, was confined to the top two floors of the building housing the Cafe La Margarita and a few other shops on the basement level.

The restaurant and shops were closed for the night at the time the fire started.

The cause of the fire was not determined immediately.

N.S. Premier Hints Water Plant May Be Saved

OTTAWA (CP) — Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan emerged from a meeting with Energy Minister J. J. Greene today "more hopeful than ever" that the inoperative heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S., can be brought into production.

Premier Regan, after a 75-minute discussion with Mr. Greene, said he will present a definite proposal to Prime Minister Trudeau on the plant's future.

He had first to discuss the matter with his cabinet and with officials of Deuterium of Canada Ltd., operator of the plant.

Present at the meeting today were R. B. Cameron, president of Deuterium and chairman of the Cape Breton Development Corp., and J. Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

Premier Regan said "new initiatives" were explored at the meeting "aimed at our mutual desire of bringing the heavy water plant into production at the earliest possible date."

He would "present a proposition to Prime Minister Trudeau at the earliest possible date."

"I have never ruled out abandonment or scrapping the plant but I am more hopeful than ever that it can be brought into production," he said.

It has been estimated it would take another $30 million to get the $116 million plant, which has never produced, into operation.

The plant is four years behind schedule and has caused a heavy-water shortage that forced AECL to buy from Sweden and the Soviet Union. Mr. Gray Tuesday announced purchase of 55 tons of heavy water from Russia at a cost of $3.3 million.

Earlier this year, Mr. Greene said the Nova Scotia plant was "not our problem" and added that the federal government would help only if the province gave assurance there would be results.

A consultant's report said it would cost $30 million and take possibly another two years of construction to get the plant into production.

The federal government said it would provide $41 million in grants and loans to help rehabilitate the plant, on condition that the province find a new operator and have plans approved by AECL, the prime buyer.

However, it appeared this week that a new deal may be in the works, although Mr. Regan would give no details. He refused to comment on whether an operator has been found.

Earlier, he said a financial study is under way that would allow him to make a decision on the plant's future by Christmas. But he said after the meeting with Mr. Greene that the study has become less relevant."

Estimated cost of the Deuterium plant was $30 million when it was announced in 1963. It was to be in operation by mid-1966.

Deuterium of Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of U.S.-owned Deuterium Corp., was to be the builder and operator.

In 1966, the province announced that it would buy Deuterium of Canada Ltd. and take over the plant.

U.S. Railways Accept Pay Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. railways have accepted a presidential board's recommendations for the coastliest wage contract in industry history. But a Dec. 11 strike threat remains.

The National Railway Labor Conference Tuesday gave its approval to recommendations of a five-man emergency board appointed by President Nixon.

The proposal calls for a $1.33 hourly wage increase over three years, added to the average $3.60 hourly wage now earned by some 500,000 railway workers represented by four unions in the continuing negotiations.

That's a 36-per-cent increase which labor department and union officials agree is the biggest ever.

But C. L. Dennis, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, said Tuesday night he still is pushing for 32 cents an hour more.

He said he would call a walkout Dec. 11 if no agreement is reached by then. Dennis had rejected the recommendations the day after they were released Nov. 9.

Under the Railway Labor Act, the unions are barred from walking out for 30 days after the board releases its recommendations. That truce expires Dec. 10, the day before Dennis threatens to lead a walkout.

Road Name To Change At Highway

The new section of highway linking Wilkinson Road with Royal Oak Avenue is expected to be called Wilkinson Road.

This was the recommendation Tuesday night of the Saanich municipal planning committee.

If approved, this will mean Wilkinson Road will run through to the major interchange with Patricia Bay Highway which is to be called Royal Oak Interchange.

The existing Royal Oak Avenue would retain its name, which will mean that the major east-west road will change names in mid-stream.

Royal Oak Avenue will end just short of the new highway, with a frontage road to the new highway cutting off to the south. This, the committee agreed to advise affected residents, should retain the name Douglas Street.

The planning department had said the new route across Patrician Bay Highway should have a continuous name, whether it is Wilkinson or Royal Oak. It noted that residents had objected to the possible loss of the Royal Oak Avenue name on that section winding south of what will be the new east-west alignment.

Ottawa Will Tell Farmers How Much They Can Grow, Sell, Predicts Olson

By JIM NEAVES

OTTAWA (CP) — The time may be fast approaching when the government will tell Canadian farmers how much they can produce and how much they can sell, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said today.

Mr. Olson, speaking at the opening of the agriculture congress, said the emerging aggressive approach by government, aided by all segments of the industry, indicates a "genuine need to tailor production to market demand."

"There must be careful planning and forecasting to enable the farmer to decide on an appropriate level of production," he said.

Mr. Olson also said a legislative framework is necessary to provide the means to market products in an orderly fashion.

"Legislation can also be enacted to effect production control by telling farmers how much they can produce and sell.

MUST BE COMPETITIVE

"I am convinced that we must keep our prices and products competitive."

If prices are not competitive Canada will not be able to export "and if we cannot export we cannot prosper," he said.

The agriculture minister said there has been a tendency in Canada to "downgrade" agriculture's importance to the national economy.

"Fewer people live on farms and in rural areas and, in a sense, because they are out of sight, our farmers are out of mind."

Also few Canadians have experienced real hunger and this abundance has fostered complacency.

But while the industry is taken for granted, roughly every third Canadian household is supported by money earned either directly or indirectly from our food industry. In addition the output of each farm worker now feeds 40 people compared with 11 prior to the Second World War.

JUSTIFIES INVOLVEMENT

Agriculture is of such importance to Canada and its people to justify major government involvement, Mr. Olson said, asking that from the government viewpoint the industry could have a three-fold role.

The first is to feed the population, the second as an important money earner for Canada, and third to provide food aid to the less fortunate in our own society and the world.

"But if governments and charitable organizations wish to use our agricultural resources to help the less fortunate in the world there is an obligation to spread the cost across our entire society.

"We cannot expect the agricultural industry or farmers to bear a disproportionate share of the load."

Mr. Olson said the farmer's returns for his labor, capital and management invested is not comparable to that enjoyed by those in many other sectors of the economy.

"They should be, and mechanisms must be found to allow farmers to share the benefits their increased efficiency has brought to other Canadians."

Mr. Olson told the congress that market research and development is high on the government's list of priorities because everything possible must be done to promote, capture, hold and expand new markets for agricultural products.

He said the technology and resources now are available to enable Canada to overproduce any major farm commodity now grown.

But, he said, "There is no validity in the premise that all would be well if farmers could simply produce to a maximum.

"There may be a divine right to produce what we like, but there is no compensating divinely-inspired desire on anyone's part to purchase everything we produce."

A text of his remarks was released in advance.

Exercise 'Futile' At Outlook Meetings

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said Tuesday accurate outlook and forecast information is important to farmers, but farmer delegates questioned the value of the annual outlook conference as it came to a close.

The conference was held to discuss the agriculture department's annual outlook forecast for the industry.

Mr. Olson emphasized that the forecast information should be passed on to farmers in an "understandable form."

He said the information gleaned from the conference would be used as the basis of discussion at a three-day agricultural congress opening here today.

Statistics were in abundance, but while the economists had a field day the producers felt the exercise had been generally futile.

NO LEAD TO CASH

As the two-day conference ended, George Ross, a Manyberries, Alta., rancher, said: "I've been here two days and haven't learned how to make a dollar."

A. M. Runciman, United Grain Growers President, set the tone Monday, saying it is impossible to establish a precise figure for future grain exports.

Mr. Runciman said government forecasts of how much wheat should be sown next year are "of little value" to individual farmers. It is more important to advise farmers how much grain they can deliver from each seeded acre during the coming year—in advance of seeding. Charles Gracey of Toronto, Canadian Cattlemen's Association manager, said past statistics are useful that:

"My reaction to the projected demand for beef in 1980 is simply that any such projections should be looked on as sterile academic exercises."

LACK POLICY DISCUSSION

Sten Berg, a hog producer at Ardrossan, Alta., said discussion of federal policy was not allowed at the conference and this made it impossible to discuss the industry's future intelligently.

He quoted Dr. T. K. Warley, an agricultural economist at the University of Guelph, who told the conference Monday the picture is "all very iffy and public debate seems to have been conducted to date at the highest level of generality."

Mr. Berg said more and more farmers also are convinced that the information they are asked to provide to government is required for newspaper editors, the income tax department and the packing industry.

"It is a common statement that 'smart farmers read and listen to recommendations, then do the opposite'."

Confidence must be restored in the system by providing a confidential report to farmers before it is made public and becomes subject to "sometimes slanted comment or rumor."

HANDS OFF CATTLE

Mr. Ross added fuel when he told the 300 delegates, representing producers, farm organizations, agri-business and the federal and provincial governments, government should stay out of the cattle industry.

"One minute we are told to grow wheat, the next we are told to grow cattle and a few short months later we are told not to grow wheat," he said.

"A lot of western farmers are not too happy right now sitting out there on their summerfallowed fields."

DRIVE GETS THE BIG OK!

OK

says Mrs. K. Tippett of St. Vital, Manitoba.

We gave Mrs. Tippett an advanced pack of new lower phosphate DRIVE, reformulated with substitute materials. Here's what she had to say about it:

"I liked the idea of a really good detergent and a stain remover working together. So I used DRIVE. Now that I have tried the new lower phosphate formula, I shall go on using it. It doesn't seem to have changed DRIVE's ability to give me a clean stain-free wash, and that's all I want."

This is just the beginning. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to use substitute materials to lower phosphate levels while maintaining DRIVE's high quality performance.

Region Asked to Move Into Conservation Field

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A group of citizens Tuesday decided to act, not talk, on the need for conservation measures to protect salmon streams and the esthetic values of the capital region.

By a vote of 30 to 5 they endorsed a motion requesting the B.C. government to provide conservation legislation to enable regional districts to move into the conservation field around urban areas.

Opposition to the motion came from a few individuals who held that conservation was a government responsibility — a responsibility which it had neglected."

●

The group represented about 14 conservation and PTA organizations in the Greater Victoria area. The meeting was organized by the Community Planning Association of Canada, Capital Regional district branch.

The motion calls for legislation and an appropriate grant structure to enable regional districts wishing to take on the function to engage in conservation programs to protect streams and to safeguard the fauna and flora.

●

A similar motion was endorsed by the Union of B.C. Municipalities two years ago, but so far the government has taken no action.

In Ontario regional districts can finance conservation measures partly from provincial government funds and federal grants.

The federal grants are mainly used for water conservation, such as construction of dams and reservoirs to maintain stream flow in summer or to acquire flood lands for water storage.

The provincial government grants are used for stream improvement and protection.

British Columbia has no such legislation, though the government has undertaken conservation programs in remote areas.

While the meeting was called primarily to discuss the Goldstream problem, the broader conservation issue was raised by Howard English, a director of the Victoria Fish and Game Protection Association.

Goldstream, where spawning salmon earlier this month were endangered by the lack of water, was only one of several creeks in need of attention, he said.

"There are other streams in Sooke, such as De Mamiel, as well as others up the east coast of Vancouver Island, which are being neglected.

"Legislation in British Columbia is not designed to protect the salmon," he pointed out. "The irony is that fishing is one of our major industries and yet it's neglected by the government."

Environment should have first priority, before development, he said.

●

"I'm tired of seeing dried-out streams during the summer months," said a woman. "I came to this meeting to see some action taken."

George Buvery, Albert Head Ratepayers' Association, said conservation legislation would enable regional districts to acquire strips of land along streams and would strengthen their zoning powers to protect water courses, marshes and other areas of special ecological interest.

Jimmy Gorse, who opposed the motion but later voted in favor, said if the government approved conservation legislation, it would enable it to "pass the buck" to municipalities.

Costs for conservation programs would be passed on to ratepayers in the capital region, he claimed.

●

"Conservation is low down on the list of government priorities," he stated. "It has done practically nothing in this field. Let's press the government to enact legislation with teeth in it and enforce it."

Wilf Harper, a director of the Victoria Canoe Club, replied if people wanted to preserve their environment they must be prepared to share costs with both provincial and federal governments.

"The environmental problem is a serious one and may eventually lead to disaster," he said. "We must take action and start the ball rolling at a local level."

John Di Castri, chairman of the local planning association, said citizens must commit themselves if they want any action taken on conservation programs, such as preservation of salmon in Goldstream.

"They must participate in conservation issues," he said. "They have a stake in the community and I think it's up to all of us to make our views known."

The Goldstream issue is an example of what people can do if they start laying it on the line," he added. "The save the fish campaign received a tremendous response, both financially and morally."

Goldstream park naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King said he was certain the citizens of Greater Victoria would back any move to save the salmon in streams in the Capital Region.

"Fifty thousand people and over 3,000 school children have so far visited Goldstream to see the salmon run," he said. "They realize what is at stake — yes, they will back us."

APPEARING in recital tonight for the first time in Canada, is soprano Lorraine Gorrell. Second in the University of Victoria's evening series in MacLaurin auditorium, the recital will begin at 8 p.m. The versatile young singer who has master's degrees in music from Yale University and has been pursuing a professional singing career in the United States, has been equally successful in operatic roles, in oratorio, and as an interpreter of 20th century music. At the piano will be Mary Ducker, also a newcomer to Victoria and a member of the Victoria Conservatory of Music faculty Miss Ducker studied piano and accompanying at the Royal Academy of Music with Max Pirani.

Chicago Seven Jurors Told 'Keep Trying'

CHICAGO (WP) — The juror who negotiated the guilty verdict in the Chicago Seven conspiracy last February has testified she believed that Judge Julius J. Hoffman twice privately urged the jury to keep deliberating despite its apparent deadlock.

With Judge Hoffman presiding at an unusual hearing Friday, Kay Richards Stevens recalled under questioning two occasions when the jury had sent out messages informing the judge they could not reach a decision.

She said the first time the federal marshal returned, "he said his honor requested us to keep deliberating . . . that he could keep us there as long as he wanted to . . . I remember something to the effect that the judge would call us when he was ready if we were not coming up with a verdict."

MESSAGES DESCRIBED

Mrs. Stevens, youngest of the jurors at age 23, generally corroborated the testimony of other jurors, who Thursday described the messages to Judge Hoffman.

She was the first, however, specifically to acknowledge believing that the judge had sent back the response to continue deliberations.

The messages were carried to and from the room by a deputy marshal, Ron Dobrowski, who is scheduled to give his version of events Monday.

Judge Hoffman has kept silent on his role during the two days of testimony except to say — in response to questions from the defence lawyers — that he does not have the notes referred to by the jurors.

The defence is trying to prove that Judge Hoffman improperly communicated with the jury out of the presence of the defendants and their lawyers. They hope to have the five convictions reversed on that ground.

Judge Hoffman was ordered to hold the extraordinary hearing by the seventh circuit court of appeals after two jurors described the deadlock messages in a magazine interview.

Mrs. Stevens had played an unusual and important role in the jury room. As she explained in a series of newspaper articles published after the trial, she had negotiated a compromise verdict between two bitterly divided factions on the jury.

Eight jurors, including herself, favored convicting all seven defendants on all counts and the other four jurors favored acquitting everyone. They finally agreed to convict five defendants on one count of crossing state lines with intent to incite a riot at the Democratic national convention in 1968.

More questioning Friday brought out the fact that Mrs. Stevens, during the trial, was engaged to a man employed by Cook County. Asked what position her then-fiance has held, she replied, "I don't care to answer that."

She said that during the trial her fiance, unknown to her, was arranging for the Chicago Sun Times to publish her account of the jurors' experiences.

The series was published a few days after the trial ended. Her articles did not mention what she acknowledged Friday — that the jury twice was instructed to keep deliberating despite apparent deadlocks.

Trudeau To Attend Cup Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will formally signal Saturday that, as he said here Friday night, the terrorist Quebec "crisis now is in hand."

He will attend the Grey Cup game in Toronto and on the morning of the game visit a children's hospital.

★ ★ ★

It will be his first public function, outside of the capital and excluding funerals, since the Oct. 5 kidnapping of the still missing British diplomat, James Cross.

One of the cancellations was the long-planned Oct. 19 to 29 visit to Russia. Plans now appear in the works to make the Soviet visit next spring.

The number of RCMP plainclothes men surrounding Trudeau has decreased and the prime minister now walks around without bodyguards fore and aft.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1970 —PAGE 41

Overflow Crowd Debates Drugs In Highly Successful Panel Talk

By STEVE HUME

The people of Victoria turned a routine panel discussion on the Le Dain commission's interim report on the non-medical use of drugs into a smashing success Tuesday night.

They packed into the Newcombe Auditorium at the Provincial Museum to listen to four experts from various fields state their views and opinions of the controversial report.

And when the experts had finished, the audience participated enthusiastically, with people of all ages lining up at two microphones to toss questions at the panel or to simply state their personal feelings.

Le Dain commission member Peter Stein, who sat with the panel but did not make a statement, said he was "intrigued and a bit amazed" at the turnout.

"Here you all are," he said, ". . . trying to understand a phenomenon which has successfully divided many communities. There is a tone in this room which is encouraging."

The audience which faced him represented a broad cross-section of the Victoria community, and there was an atmosphere of unity rather than a feeling of polarization.

Long-haried youths sat next to balding middle-aged men in grey suits, hip university students sat down with little old ladies.

A heavy concentration of middle-aged and elderly people were given seats as younger members of the audience unconcernedly plunked themselves down in the aisles while others happily shared their chairs with girl companions.

Another 250 spectators, unable to crowd into the auditorium and spurred to action by lighthouse philosopher Bill Scott, held their own impromptu discussion in the lobby.

Those in the auditorium listened to statements from Saanich police Sgt. Bill Chisholm, lawyer Jakob S. de Villiers, Saanich Mental Health Centre director and psychiatrist Dr. John Wood, and Cool-Aid worker Charles Barber.

Stein, a Vancouver social worker, sat with the panel for the purpose of clarifying any misunderstandings or questions about the Le Dain commission. The discussion was organized by the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island.

Chisholm, who drew laughter from the younger people in the audience, started the panel discussion by saying "my comments are from a policeman's point of view." He emphasized that his views were not those of the Saanich police.

The "main danger" of marijuana was to young people and cited cases he knew where youngsters "lost all ambition and drive and have become school drop-outs and social misfits," he said.

The stance of the Le Dain report concerning marijuana was "totally unrealistic," he said. "This is just another example of a too-permissive society."

"It is difficult to understand the commission's lenient approach to simple possession while maintaining a firm stand against trafficking."

Chisholm quoted from a report which said marijuana had been outlawed in Nigeria after gangs of pot crazed hoodlums ran wild and rioted.

He said he agreed with the report's stand on drug education.

"Every civilized nation in the world today has laws against the use of canabis," he said, and stated he was against any change in existing drug laws.

Wood criticized the interim report on technical grounds.

"The majority of the reports cannot be validated in any way," he said, adding that any researcher who drew conclusions before completing his investigation was in need of "a psychiatric examination."

"You'd run through a whole page and not find a fact. Astonishing!"

Wood said marijuana should be removed from the schedule of the Narcotic Control Act and come under jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Act.

He described one of his patients as being an LSD-user "who got angry with a movie theatre and tried to kill it. . . . When a police car came he got angry with that and tried to kill it too."

De Villiers gave a rundown on the legal status of marijuana and extablished an historical perspective. He said changing the law was more complex than it first appeared.

One of the chief obstacles to legalization of marijuana is an international treaty signed with 72 other countries by Canada in 1961.

He said it was naive of the Le Dain report to suggest that first offences by soft-drug users be dealt with by a $100 fine which would not be enforced by the alternative of imprisonment.

"How they expect anybody to collect a $100 debt from a hippie, I don't know," he said.

COOL-AID'S

Barber hardly touched on the Le Dain report.

He said youngsters are turning away from established social welfare agencies because they want immediate help and they don't want moral lectures.

A local doctor who works at a venereal disease clinic attempts to degrade patients by calling them "sluts, studs, perverts and promiscuous vermin," he said.

"And the kids are going elsewhere for help."

He charged that "drug education films made in Ottawa by people who normally make synchonized swimming films are simply not going to be believed."

There is an "hysterical and mindless" reaction to drug abuse throughout Canada, Barber said.

He cited as an example the case of a 13-year-old girl who committed the "heinous, abominable, unforgiveable sin of using marijuana" and was threatened with sterilization by her mother if she ever did it again.

It was during the public question period following the panel discussion that some of the more lively and original points were made pertaining to the report and the drug phenomenon in general.

Some observations, summarized:

Stein: All drugs are potentially harmful. And that includes the electro-narcotic drug of television;

● It will remain up to each and every Canadian . . . to try to determine what he or she will do with this information (the report).

● Not everyone uses drugs to escape. Some use drugs as other people sail, golf, play tennis;

● Young people are aware of the fact that the law (regarding marijuana) does not seem to be applied consistently across the board, across the country, to all age groups;

● The greatest concern . . . is with the adult drug user . . . involved in chronic and excessive use and abuse of a whole range of pills and alcohol and who sets a model of drug use for the younger person;

Wood: (in response to a question about relative effects of alcohol and marijuana on drivers) I wouldn't want to be driving the car coming toward either one.

● We're not curing people or solving their problems by just sticking them in jail. We're creating new problems. I'm unequivocally against long jail terms.

De Villiers: I notice a widespread contempt for the law on the part of young people (because of "Draconian" punishment of marijuana offenders).

A middle-aged man: It is very bad for a society to have law against personal behavior. The onus is on the government, on us as the government, to show the thing is very bad before passing laws against kinds of personal behavior.

A mod-style young man: Although legally no one is outside the law, mentally a lot of drug users are outside the law.

● It's much easier to pass a law than to get to the bottom of the problem, in fact it's the ultimate cop-out.

A long-haired youth: To accept the enemy as the thing within ourselves is the best step toward a solution of the problem.

An old man: Drug abuse has become an epidemic like it was in Egypt in the First World War.

A middle-aged man: I would rather help them (drug users) in another way than sending them to jail. Ninety per cent of them want jobs. I would rather spend the tax dollar to help them in that way.

Barber: (on drug progression) The casual use of heroin increased since the drinking age was lowered and brought 19-year-olds kids into contact with predominantly older heroin users at a local beer parlor.

● That marijuana leads you to anything else at all is patently absurd. Tobacco leads you to alcohol? Who would make that claim?

EX-MAYOR BEARS SCREENED START

What promised to be a serious panel discussion of the Le Dain commission's interim report on the non-medical use of drugs got off to a light-hearted start Tuesday night at the Newcombe Auditorium.

As former Victoria mayor Hugh Stephen, acting as panel moderator, gave a dignified introductory address to some 800 citizens jamming the auditorium, embarrassed titters rippled through the audience.

Stephen, brave but bewildered, continued to speak despite increased giggling.

The amazed audience, meanwhile, watched as an automatic projector screen slowly lowered from the ceiling and hit him on the head.

As the screen crumpled about his ears, the ex-mayor calmly turned to Peter Stein, a Le Dain commission member participating in the panel.

"Now I know what Stein is really smoking," he said.

"Although I didn't realize it immediately, I'm in a pretty sad state about my wife's weight — and it's effect on our marriage. When we were first married, my wife was very careful to look her best at all times. I was so proud of her, I couldn't stop talking about her to all my friends and business acquaintances.

"But now, she's gained some weight. And as far as I can tell she doesn't care about how she looks at all! She makes no effort, for example, to hide her figure with the right kind of clothes. She doesn't even set her hair anymore!

"When I speak to her about it, she starves herself at mealtime in front of me — and then stuffs herself with snacks when I'm not supposed to be looking. It seems that she doesn't care about herself anymore. And that makes me wonder how much she still cares about me. Her figure is out-of-all-proportion to what it was. Keep Close Watch on Hyacinth Bulbs

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hyacinth bulbs that were put away in pots of soil should be checked weekly to see if they need a little water. The sign of need will be white roots coming through the drainage holes at the bottom. This means the roots are ready to take in nutrients from the soil; therefore water is required.

Hilda

If the soil is quite dry, it would be a good idea to stand the pot in tepid water for an hour to take up all it will hold. From then on, some water may be required every third day but the best guide is the condition of the soil. Don't add more if it is damp.

After rooting, the hyacinth pots can be taken from the dark cool rooting place to a warmer temperature in the light. In about a week's time the thick green top should be seen pushing through the bulb covering.

Watch this for another week, and if top does not come fast enough, see that it has a temperature near 70 degrees F. during the day and strong daylight too.

Sometimes when forcing hyacinths in pots, we find the buds fail to keep pace with the leaves, resulting in flowers opening way down at the base of the wide green foliage.

This condition can be at least partially overcome by making brown paper ones to fit snugly over the hyacinth pots to keep out the light but not the warmth.

The hole about the size of a pencil at the tip of the cone will admti enough light to encourage the flower stem to reach upwards.

After three days see what progress has been made, and provide the necessary tepid water.

Once the flower stems begin to grow, hyacinths can go into a cooler temperature which will slow them a bit but also keep them blooming for a longer period.

Daffodil bulbs and other outdoor narcissi which were potted in early October will have had sufficient rooting time in a dark, cold place. Green tips will be showing and roots will be through the drainage holes.

Now the pots may be stood in good light and sunshine (when available) at a temperature between 60 and 70 deg. F. until buds show.

A large bowl of rocks and stones is still the best way of keeping the air slightly moist around these spring bulbs. Have the water below the surface of the stones, and place the pot on the stones above the water level.

This is the same method we use to supply humidity around tropical pot plants. The bowl of stones is attractive and efficient.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Generally speaking, bridge players do not complain when they are defeated by players who are known to be superior. After all, superior players are expected to win more often than their competitors. But when one is defeated by an inferior players because the latter had an illogical "hunch," the loser complains bitterly (and, in my opinion, justifiably).

The latter was the situation in the deal presented today, which arose in a team-of-four match. As a result of this deal, the superior team lost the match.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ 7
♡ A 6 5 4
◇ 7 3
♣ A Q J 10 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

West's two heart overcall was of the weakish variety, showing a good six-card suit within a not too robust hand. South's three heart call was a cue-bid, showing first-round control of hearts (either the ace or a void).

When North jumped to five clubs, in theory he guaranteed a singleton heart: when a player bids two suits and jumps in a third suit, he presumably cannot have more than a singleton in the fourth suit.

South, appreciating that his side rated to have no heart losers at a club contract, contracted for the small slam.

The above sequence of bidding is the way it occurred at the table where the "superior" team was sitting North-South. West's king of hearts opening was captured by South's ace. The dummy was then entered via the diamond king, and the club finesse was taken. As is evident, West's singleton king won the trick. In time, East made his spade ace, for the setting trick.

When the deal was replayed, our "inferior" South declarer also arrived at a six club contract, although via a different sequence of bidding. He, too, received the king of hearts opening lead. But instead of finessing for the club king, he laid down the club ace. When he caught the king, the slam was there for the taking.

The club finesse was the right play, although on this given day it was "wrong." The finesse would win whenever East was dealt the K-9-7, the K-9, or the K-7; it would be the losing play only when East was dealt the doubleton 9-7. Today, East happened to be dealt the doubleton 9-7.

THE UNSINKABLE MOLLY BROWN. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Debbie Reynolds and Harve Presnell star in this NBC pre-Thanksgiving Day presentation It's a big, bright and brassy musical comedy by Meredith Wilson who gave us "The Music Man." Debbie is an extended version of her supercharged self, playing a 15-year-old river-rat tomboy, who leaves home to find her fortune out west. In Colorado she meets and marries a miner who quickly strikes it rich. As a wealthy lady in Leadville, she's out of place, which doesn't stop her from taking their $20 million and trying to crack high society in Denver. Her attempts to buy her way in, include ostentatiousness that must have given the studio's decorators and special effects men happy fits. With native intelligence, she realizes that American society would rather import than inherit new members, and she sails for Europe for social transformation. Among the hits retained from the original stage production are "Belly up to the Bar Boys" and 'I Ain't Down Yet." Ed Begley, Jack Kruschen and Hermione Buddeley are featured.

ROOM 222. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4 "Dreams of Glory" The real purpose of karate is given some real meaning tonight, though it might have been explored even more. It starts with a young and timid student being humiliated by a bully in public. Pete Dixon suggests karate to gain confindence. Most people think that means karate as a weapon, which is not really its purpose, as our young man learns when he starts the rigorous training.

BALLET SPECIAL. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Canada's first rock ballet, combining traditional dance with the contemporary sounds of a Toronto rock group, The Lighthouse, is presented in this hour-long special The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is featured in what choreographer Brian Macdonald describes as a "controlled happening."

* * *

THE JOHNNY CASH SHOW. 9 p.m., Channel 4. You'd think the guitar-plunking autobiographical essay-medley would have been just about done to death by this time, but when Cash and guest star Glen Campbell go at it, it's still a stimulating bit of musical business. They wind it up with a duet to "Arkansas." Tony Joe White is also on hand singing "Conjure Woman" while the Stonemans contribute their hit "Doin' My Time." The evening's comedy feature is "The Legend of the Spoon Gang," by June Carter Cash and the Statlers.

* * *

MEDICAL CENTER. 9 p.m., Channel 12. Here's another very tense though less believable than usual episode for this series George Chakiris stars as a young surgeon who is still a few year away from his first open heart operation. Then Dr. Gannon is blinded during a murder attempt. He has such an operation scheduled and it can't be postponed. While his would-be killer is still after him Gannon is busy trying to inject the intricacies of the operation on the young surgeon's brain and hands. Frank Converse is featured.

* * *

HAWAII FIVE-O. 10 p.m., Channel 12. Hume Cronyn makes a rare and welcome television appearance bringing a bit of "Batman" to this usually more austere series. He is a little old crime-maker whose aging has honed his wit to a fine edge. His great delight is twitting McGarrett and his progress, and freely publicizing them afterwards. The press is having a merry time with the little genius, while MGarrett prepares to make like an island volcano.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A while ago I read in an article by one of England's greatest children's specialists that the third commonest disease that he is called on to treat is bedwetting among children. We doctors call it enuresis. Then as I looked through the 60 or 70 medical journals that come to my desk every month, I marvelled that in not a single one was there an article on bedwetting and what to do for it.

★ ★ ★

Finally, I went to a big university library and looked through hundreds of journals, and I noticed that only in the British Canadian and Australian medical journals were physicians writing at all about the problem of bedwetting. In many cases, they wrote enthusiastically about a mechanical device called a "buzzer," which works on the principle of conditioning the child. That is, the device is so arranged that if the child starts to urinate in his sleep, the buzzer is set off and wakes him and his mother, so that she can take him to the bathroom. The doctors n the biggest children's hospital in London said that the buzzer is the only method of treatment worth spending time on, and it quickly cures a high percentage of the children.

The very few American physicians who wrote on the subject of bedwetting advised getting a urologist to examine the urinary bladder and its outlet, or they advised using certain medicines such as tranquilizers, or discussed certain psychiatric problems that the bedwetting child might possibly have.

What interested me much was that a number of the best articles were written by psychiatrists who said that they had not had success with psychotherapy alone and had become interested in the buzzer method and had had success with it in many cases.

★ ★ ★

There are a few youngsters who have bladders that are too small, or some obstruction of the outlet of the bladder, and can have their problem corrected with surgery. There are also cases in which drugs immediately cure the child. However, in the majority of cass, the child appears to be normal physically, and even after trying several methods of treatment with drugs and perhaps even psychotherapy, the problem continues. Often, too, the physician tends not to take the matter seriously and brushes away the parents' question by saying that they will just have to wait for the child to outgrow it. When we don't know very much about how to treat a disease, we doctors have a bad habit of not wanting to talk about it.

MPs 'Hurl' Verbal Acid

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs hurled verbal acid in the Commons Tuesday as the House began debate on the second New Democrat motion to set the government's public order bill back to the committee stage in an effort to inject opposition-sponsored changes into the bill.

The volley began as David Lewis (NDP—York South) said the government refused to accept the opposition amendment to the Public Order (Temporary measures) Act, 1970 because it would be admitting that the regulations under the War Measures Act represented "panic-stricken legislation."

"I say you're a phoney," shot back Prime Minister Trudeau.

The prime minister was "an expert to learn from" Mr. Lewis retaliated.

Mr. Trudeau had discarded every progressive idea he ever had. The government had "set out deliberately to create a state of panic" in Canada.

DEBATE GOES ON

Debate continues today on the NDP motion, which seeks to send the bill back to committee-of-the-whole stage from the present debate on third and final reading. The bill moved out of committee stage — clause-by-clause study—Monday.

The motion would have the House reconsider a clause of the bill that allows evidence of support of the Front de Liberation du Quebec prior to the bill taking effect to form presumption of guilt of present support of the FLQ.

The bill would replace regulations under the War Measures Act invoked Oct. 16. It would make membership or support of the aims of the FLQ a crime— as did the regulations—punishable by five years in prison.

Earlier Tuesday, the Commons defeated 113 to 78 an NDP motion to have the committee-of-the-whole reconsider the issue of a review board to oversee the administration of the legislation by Quebec authorities.

In that vote Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes lined up against the Liberal majority.

The watchdog clause was defeated 113 to 78.

Standings in the House now are 153 Liberals, 73 Conservatives, 23 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes, one independent and one vacant for a total of 264.

Opposition amendments to the retroactive clause and on the watchdog issue had already been defeated in committee stage.

ACCUSES TRUDEAU

Mr. Lewis accused Mr. Trudeau of painting the prospect of a massive insurrection when actually only 50 to 100 criminals were involved in terrorist activities—and only because police had been unable to catch them.

Mr. Trudeau then left the chamber and Colin Gibson (L—Hamilton - Went worth) entered the fray, charging the NDP deputy leader with a "sardonic and ill-conceived partisan attack" on the prime minister.

Mr. Gibson said the NDP would have "waved the phoney flag of justice against the barrels of machine-guns" in hte midst of bombings and rioting.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, shouted the Ontario Liberal, was a "damn poor defender of the Canadian nation."

The Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, extends the general powers under the War Measures Act until next April 30, including extraordinary police authority to arrest and detain persons and search and seize property.

B.C. Against Free Trade In Food

An apparent federal government trend toward free trade in agricultural commodities is a major source of concern to British Columbia, according to a brief prepared for the second Canadian Agricultural Congress which opened in Ottawa today.

"British Columbia ... would be among the first to seek compensation from the federal government on behalf of those industries that would be damaged by free trade policies," the brief states.

It was prepared by the B.C. department of agriculture, the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and the B.C. Farmers' Union.

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford heads a large delegation to the conference which is discussing a federal task force report on agriculture.

The brief states that B.C. is particularly vulnerable to dumping of surplus products by other countries. Horticulture is among the most seriously affected by dumping, it said.

"As a guiding principle we suggest any future increases in food imports should be limited by a small annual percentage based on an average of import quantities of recent years and tied to a percentage of the increase in the markets available . . .

"Any further moves in the direction of free trade should not be made without great care and maximum prior consultation with affected industries."

Oxfam Aids Victims In Pakistan

Oxfam of Canada announced today it has sent $100,000, three helicopters and a hovercraft to carry relief to victims of the East Pakistan disaster.

Among groups being helped are Brothers of the Holy Cross, Canadian missionaries working in the flooded area. Brother Flavian Laplante of St. Aime, Que., has worked among fishermen there for 20 years, organizing co-operatives and general development.

Brother Laplante acted as chairman of the Emergency Relief Committee set up by the government after the 1960 cyclone. He will organize relief measures for all inhabitants.

Oxfam's field representative, Richard Taylor, is in Chittagong now investigating where help is most urgently needed. Hundreds of thousands in that area, homeless and in danger of starvation, need food, clothing, tents and drugs.

REPLACE BOATS

Oxfam also predicts "there will be a tremendous job to be done in housing, the restoration of agriculture and replacement of fishing boats on which this population depends so heavily — to mention only a few of the more obvious needs."

Victorians are told that "to assist this vital work . . . any gift, however large or small, will be most welcome and tax receipts will be given."

Donations may be sent to Oxfam of Canada, 795 Meaford Ave., Victoria.

New Democrats Elect Slate

Resignation Said Final

Deputy Labor Minister William Sands said Tuesday it is "pretty late in the day" for department registrar Ewan Rowntree to have "second thoughts" about his disputed resignation from the department.

"He offered his resignation and I accepted," Sands said, "It's as simple as that."

Sands said the department is already seeking a replacement "and the whole matter is in the hands of the civil service commission."

Rowntree said last week he has not resigned from the position and has "put the entire matter into the hands of my lawyer."

A civil service commission spokesman said the commission was prepared to deal with the case when it comes up. No official notice of grievance had yet been received, he said.

VANCOUVER ANGERED BY CAMPBELL THREAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council reacted with anger Tuesday to a threat from Dan Campbell, municipal affairs minister, to cut off a $410,000 tourism grant if the city increases its hotel licence fee.

Council ignored his letter and agreed to prepare a bylaw that will establish a sliding scale of fees for different classes of rooms. The new scale would come into effect Jan. 1, 1971.

Council also agreed to write the minister and disclose its decision and also the reasons behind the move.

Both council and the hotel industry favor an individual room tax but the city lacks power under its charter to levy such a tax.

If the legislature approves a room tax at its next sitting, the licence increases would be scrapped.

Man Without a Country Christian George Hanna, 34, appeared in a Toronto court Tuesday charged with defrauding a tavern of $20. Bail was set at $25 for the man who became a celebrity in 1956 when he arrived in Port Alberni aboard a Norwegian freighter and claimed to have been aboard it for 18 months because he had no passport, hence no country. Canada admitted him but later deported him to Lebanon. Police said he arrived in Canada this time on a Liberian freighter Oct. 27.

Playboy czar Hugh Hefner's Playboy Towers Hotel in Chicago was picketed by nine members of a Women's Liberation movement Tuesday night while 19-year-old Cheryl Lee of Richmond, Calif., was being crowned Playboy Bunny of the Year. She spurned the contention of the picketers that the crown was an insult to femininity. "I don't feel insulted — I just feel beautiful."

The owner of a car smashed by a chunk of flying whale blubber, Walter Umenhofer, has been paid in full by an insurance firm, Chubb Pacific Indemnity Group of Portland. The damage to his car occurred when a dead whale that had been washed up on the beach was dynamited by Oregon highways crews.

Former newspaperman Ian B. Macdonald has been appointed special assistant to Defence Minister Donald Macdonald. His duties will include press relations, the defence minister's office has announced.

Detroits' ragged, bearded flower man, Robert Schaefer, has died. For years he had sold flowers and trifles on the downtown streets and his customers took up a collection to pay for his funeral this week.

U.S. Attorney Edward R. Neaher of Brooklyn has given the green light on pants suits in his office. He said Tuesday they are "on the scene," but cautioned his girls to use discretion so that "visitors will not mistake the office for a Greenwich Village coffee house."

San Francisco federal court Judge Alfonso Zirpoli has ruled that the fire department can only dictate facial hair styles of firemen insofar as safety is concerned. Hoseman Robert J. Burrowes, 30, had laid suit contending his constitutional rights were violated because he couldn't wear a handlebar moustache.

Yugoslav Mudrinic Bogdan, 21, needs an American bride by Jan. 27 to stay in the United States. Miss Patricia Damico, who says she loves him because he loves America, plans to marry him in Dunkirk, New York, next month. She speaks only English. He speaks only Yugoslav.

Dentist Drowns

VANCOUVER (CP) — The body of a 43-year-old North Vancouver dentist was found Tuesday washed up on the beach at Lions Bay.

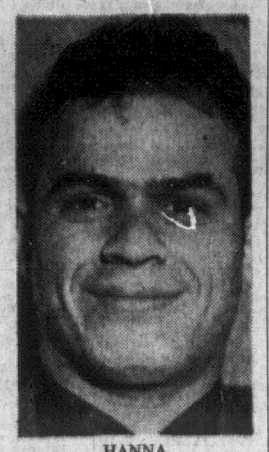

Dr. Ian McLeod was reported missing Sunday afternoon after failing to return from a fishing trip in Howe Sound.

His body and the 14-foot boat he had rented at Horseshoe Bay Sunday morning were found close together on the beach at about noon Tuesday.

An RCMP spokesman said no decision had been made on aninquest.

Parents File Writ

LONDON (AP) — The parents of a convicted murderer hanged in 1962 served a writ on Lord Butler, the home secretary who reviewed the case. Lawyers for Lord Butler, now master of Trinity College, said he would accept the writ. Mr. and Mrs. James Hanratty of London claim damage for "grief and agony" suffered over the hanging of their son, Terry.

Job-Training Subsidy Offered by Gaglardi

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi says he has appealed to industry to help remove young people from British Columbia welfare rolls by providing them with trades training.

His department would be prepared to provide a form of subsidy by paying them welfare for up to 30 days after which time the firm using them would take them on payroll and continue their training.

In an interview Tuesday, Mr. Gaglardi said he has proposed such a program verbally to officials of the Employers' Council of British Columbia and hopes that organized labor will co-operate.

He said his plan is an extension of his earlier efforts to initiate a modified "work-for-welfare" plan in which municipalities would use employable persons on welfare for projects.

OPPOSITION VOICED

But a spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees in Vancouver called the work-for-welfare program "a teardrop in an ocean of misery."

Jack Phillips said after a meeting of four CUPE representatives here Tuesday that the union is opposed to any plan that would compel welfare recipients to work for their benefits.

Mr. Gaglardi, during a recent Social Credit League convention, said welfare recipients who were healthy and able to work would be placed in government jobs, mostly public works projects.

Mr. Phillips did, however, say that CUPE is not opposed to the provision of suitable employment opportunities to welfare recipients provided the established trade union wages and working conditions are adhered to strictly.

He added that regular employees who have been laid off and are available for re-hire must be called back before any welfare recipients are hired and that there must be no layoffs in order to accommodate welfare recipients.

"What we need," said Mr. Phillips, "is a series of bold programs on a national and provincial scale in order to create jobs for hundreds of thousands of Canadians."

Bennett Upset About Misuse Of Tourist Aid

Premier Bennett said today the cities of Victoria and Vancouver had been using $1 per capita tourist promotion grants from the province for "other purposes" and the provincial government doesn't like it.

In an apparent slap at Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock who said Tuesday the Victoria Visitors Bureau should be scrapped, Bennett said:

"I speak as minister of finance when I say that two years ago we gave the municipalities $1 per capita for tourist promotion and we expect them to use it."

In reply to a question, Bennett said that "on the whole" municipalities weren't using the money for tourism — "they're not in Victoria and Vancouver, anyway."

Asked if he was going to get tough on the issue, Bennett replied, "I don't want to get tough" and then laughed.

He prefaced his remarks with an announcement that tourism had had its best year ever in B.C. with $90 million more in business than the previous highest year, when $375 million was spent by tourists.

"This is what has given B.C. a great lift in a very difficult year. I hope this is realized by all our citizens including the mayors and aldermen," Bennett said.

Ballard Bid Not Enough For Telecast

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, vice-president of Toronto Maple Leafs, said he attempted to have Tuesday's game between the Leafs and Pittsburgh Penguins televised by offering $10,000 for the television rights, but was turned down.

MacLaren Advertising, which controls the Leafs' broadcasting, said it wasn't enough, Ballard said.

He said he made the offer after learning the game would not be shown on the CTV network. Midweek games are usually played Wednesdays and televised.

MacLaren will have CTV televise the Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks game tonight.

"I knew Channel 11 in Hamilton would be glad to show the game for us," Ballard said. "I don't think we have ever missed a game before. "We'll never sign another contract without the provision in it that all games be shown. The next deal, I don't care who it is with . . . will be for all games, no matter when or what time they're played."

STAUB SIGNED

MONTREAL (UPI) — Outfielder Rusty Staub, who led Montreal Expos in virtually every batting department during the past National Baseball League season, has signed his 1971 contract.

LONG HAIR LOSES APPEAL

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The University of Texas Athletic Council rejected an appeal this week by Frank Salzhandler, dismissed from the Longhorn swimming team because of long hair.

The council voted 8 to 1 against the appeal. A student member of the group cast the only vote in favor of the former Houston schoolboy swimming star.

Coach Pat Patterson dismissed Salzhandler from the team earlier this year. Patterson said the swimmer was challenging his authority.

Salzhandler contended he was dismissed without reason.

Jerry Believed That Jerry Had Talent to Be No. 1

CALGARY (CP) — When Jerry Williams was coach of Calgary Stampeders, he said second-string quarterback Jerry Keeling had "all you need to be number one."

Williams left two years ago for the National Football League, but Keeling now is number one with the Stampeders as they head for Saturday's Grey Cup game against Montreal Alouettes.

Critics admitted Keeling was one of the greatest defensive halfbacks ever to knock down a pass in the Canadian Football League and he was thought to be an ideal backup man if Peter Liske, the Stampeders quarterback in those days, should be ill or injured. But they openly doubted Keeling's ability to be a first-stringer.

Last Sunday at Regina, when the Stampeders eliminated Saskatchewan Roughriders from the western playoffs with a 15-14 squeaker, it was Keeling at the helm.

Four days earlier, in the second game of the best-of-three playoffs, he had fumbled the ball and Saskatchewan's Ed McQuarters recovered and scored a touchdown. Keeling was miserable.

Sunday, it was a swing pass to Hugh McKinnis from Keeling that put Calgary within field goal distance for the three points that gave them the western championship in the closing seconds of play.

"I thought about it and thought about it," said Keeling in an interview Tuesday. "I felt that if we didn't win on Sunday it was my fault that we didn't get into the Grey Cup, that I'd let the whole team down.

"The biggest problem I had was to get myself to stop worrying about what had happened."

He said he had doubts about the swing pass play "right after it happened."

"Maybe I should have run it and gone for the field goal from there. Even if we'd only gotten a single out of it we would have gone into overtime and I think we could have beaten them.

"I didn't think they would blitz, and they didn't. But I did feel they would be playing far back enough to stop the pass."

The play broke for 16 yards and Larry Robinson dropped the ball between the uprights despite a brisk cross-wind.

The Stampeders were to leave by air today for Toronto to begin practice for the Grey Cup.

Even getting in shape for the game Saturday will not be easy. The Stampeders, as well as being plagued by the after-effects of frostbite from the Regina game where temperatures were near zero, have a few injuries.

Trainer Larry Chace said defensive end Craig Koinzan has a bruised shoulder and a hip injury and a number of other players have assorted bruises and bumps. Wide receiver Uriel Johnson has a knee problem and flanker Gerry Shaw is bothered by a pulled leg muscle.

There also is the spectre of influenza, something that all but flattened the Stampeders just before they met Ottawa Rough Riders and lost the 1968 Grey Cup.

"Just about everybody on the club had something frozen," said Chace, commenting on the Regina game. "After having played under those adverse conditions we have to guard against the flu bug.

"It could become a problem. A lot of the guys now have colds."

IN PACHENA BIBLE CAMP MURDER CASE

RCMP Question Doctor

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor who tried to kill himself in San Francisco, Tuesday was being questioned there today by two RCMP officers investigating the bizarre Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Krait.

Krait, 23-year-old caretaker of a deserted Bible camp four miles south of the isolated village of Bamfield on the Island's west coast was found shot to death Sunday. He had last been seen alive Oct. 23.

★ ★ ★

Port Alberni RCMP said this morning two officers had been sent to San Francisco "to talk with" Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in an apartment there under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10.

The RCMP sergeant in charge of the Krait case said no charges had been brought against Stewart, and that RCMP just wanted "to ask him some questions."

U.S. Immigration authorities said Stewart and a woman companion, Maria Trigiani, 31, attempted a double-suicide Tuesday when inspectors Michael Harpold and Harry Hong sought to question them during an investigation to determine whether they were legally in the United States.

Stewart is a Canadian citizen while Miss Trigiani is an Italian national.

Immigration authorities said the couple was found in a gas-filled room after Harpold and Hong knocked at the door.

The inspectors said that when they identified themselves Stewart slammed and barricaded the door.

★ ★ ★

While trying to force the door the immigration men smelled gas, ran to an outside fire escape and climbed through a window.

They found Stewart and Miss Trigiani lying unconscious on the kitchen floor with the gas stove turned up full, the control handles removed and several empty phials lying on the floor.

The two were taken to San Francisco General Hospital but were reported as being in good condition and improving rapidly today.

The acting district director of U.S. Immigration at San Francisco, Gordon Davidson, said today his department still had not determined whether Stewart was lawfully in the country.

Port Alberni RCMP identified Stewart as a retired doctor who had been "a nomadic type" roaming from port to port on his 35-foot motor vessel Gypsy.

Nixon Fires Hickel

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon tonight fired Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel because of a lack of "mutual confidence" and announced his intention to replace him with Maryland Congressman Rogers C. B. Morton.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler made the announcement following a 25-minute meeting between Nixon and Hickel. It came less than 24 hours after Hickel appeared on national television and said he had no intention of stepping down from his job.

Ziegler said Nixon "requested the resignation and accepted it," immediately.

The firing came just 24 hours after Hickel had returned from Ottawa where he headed the U.S. delegation in talks on Canadian-American energy policy. (See story below.)

Hickel was reported to have raised Nixon's ire when he protested against administration attitudes toward young people at the time of the Kent State University killings.

Ziegler told reporters Hickel was not told beforehand why he had been summoned to the White House.

U.S. May Drop All Oil Quotas

OTTAWA (CP) — The hazy outlines of a broad oil-export agreement emerged Tuesday at the close of a joint United States-Canada ministerial conference.

The agreement has the immediate effect of clearing the way for all the crude oil Canada can export to the U.S. in 1971. This would likely mean a 100,000-barrel-a-day increase in piped oil exports from the present daily rate of about 750,000 barrels.

The additional oil exported would be worth about $100 million in a full year.

Officials of both countries then would try to work out an arrangement for future years that would provide "full and unimpeded" access of Canadian crude oil to U.S. markets.

As part of a longer-term agreement, Canada would have to maintain a reserve of excess oil to meet any emergency disruption in oil imports from outside North America.

WOULD SERVE EAST

The U.S. would meet any shortage in eastern Canada but those supplies would have to be replaced in the United States by oil from Western Canada.

A future agreement also depends on whether Canada is successful in overcoming U.S. reluctance to lift quotas against Canadian oil imports as long as Eastern Canada is dependent on what some consider uncertain overseas suppliers.

The U.S. has avoided heavy dependence on Canadian imports as long as there was a chance such supplies might be diverted to meet emergencies in Quebec or the Atlantic region.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, head of the Canadian delegation, and Secretary of State William Rogers, head of the U.S. delegation, both expressed confidence that the meeting had been a success

However, there was no indication of agreement on the issues of pollution, Canadian uranium exports or the U.S.-Canada automotive agreement.

REPORTS U.S. STAND

Mr. Sharp told a news conference the Americans had argued Canada should be prepared to give up safeguards contained in the auto pact because of substantial benefits already achieved.

U.S. officials said this would be one method by which Canada could assist the Americans in correcting a troublesome payments deficit.

Mr. Sharp said Canada replied that a current payments surplus now enjoyed in Canada was temporary. He said all safeguards could not be abandoned at once. But certain revisions in the 1965 trade pact might be possible.

OIL STOCKS TAKE JUMP

Times News Services

TORONTO — Reacting to the news that the U.S. has agreed in principle to allow Canadian oils full access to U.S. markets western oil stocks jumped sharply upward in trading today on the Toronto stock market.

At the close the oils index was up 9.71 points to $189.41. Details on Page 6.

Guinea Makes Plea for Aid After Raid by Mercenaries

DAKAR, Senegal (CP) — Guinea announced today that it was invaded again Tuesday night. President Sekour Toure called on "friendly countries" to send all the help they can as quickly as possible.

Radio Conakry, the West African nation's official radio station, referred to new "enemy incursions."

"Thanks to the vigilance of the people," the station said, "the attempts and evil intentions of the Portuguese imperialistic enemy were thrown back by Guinean patriots, the army and the glorious people of Guinea."

Toure has said the invading troops, which first landed on Guinea's shores early Sunday, are mercenaries hired by Portugal and attacking from Portuguese ships. Portugal has denied any involvement.

In Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, the secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity said today that Sudan, Egypt, Nigeria, Libya and Algeria have placed troops on the alert to go to Guinea if needed.

Zambian Vice-President Mainza Chona said in Addis Ababa that an emergency meeting of the OAU council of ministers will be held Dec. 9 to discuss the situation in Guinea.

Chona also appealed to members of the OAU, the non-aligned nations and the "progressive forces of the world" to extend all possible material, financial and military assistance to Guinea to repel the invaders, whom he alleged had the backing of not only Portugal but also "certain NATO powers."

Davis Attacks Gulf Drill Bid

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A recommendation from the Science Council of Canada for the immediate launching of a federal-provincial feasibility study on offshore drilling was vigorously attacked today by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

There is "no way" oil drilling will be permitted in the Gulf of Georgia regardless of the findings from such a study, Davis said. (See also Page 14.)

The issue "is 100 per cent decided and even the oil companies are winding up their leases right now," he said when contacted in Winnipeg today.

Jurisdiction Issue Revived

The study recommendation was made in a report sent to Prime Minister Trudeau by Science Council chairman O. M. Solandt which also revived the controversial political question of continental shelf jurisdiction generally.

Davis was successful last spring in stopping B.C. Mines Minster Frank Richter's campaign to promote exploratory drilling by oil companies in the gulf.

There was a hint in the council report's approach that the federal Energy, Mines and Resources department may be giving moral support to the B.C. government to help it go ahead with promoting the oil exploration.

The report's recommendation to cabinet could precipitate the split and test of strength between EMR Minister J. J. Greene and Davis.

Davis is slated to annex Greene's Water Resources Branch when the impending department of environmental affairs and renewable resources is established in a few months.

The Science Council's report, entitled Canada, Science and the Ocean, was released at a press conference here this morning with Dr. J. M. Harrison, Greene's assistant deputy minister in charge of mines and the geo-sciences branch, explaining some of its points.

(His superior is EMR deputy minister Jack Austin, a widely known Vancouver mining executive whose unusual appointment to head the department last May was a storm in the Commons.

(Opposition members said they feared conflict of interest might occur and criticized Prime Minister Trudeau's assurances Austin would sever his commercial connections during the period he is in government service.)

$1 Billion Figure Suggested

Dr. Harrison, a council member, was chairman of a committee on marine matters which drew up the report saying there is "pressing" need for Canada to push offshore gas and oil explorations.

It said expenditure for such explorations could grow to "some $1 billion by 1980" and many times that amount if major discoveries are made.

"Optimal development of our offshore resources will not occur until the various internal and international jurisdictional disputes are settled," it said.

The Science Council "recommends that a concerted effort be made to resolve the jurisdictional difficulties with dispatch" because oil companies might switch attention to other areas of the world where there are no jurisdictional disputes.

(The reference obviously was aimed at the federal-provincial argument over jurisdiction on the continental shelf.)

A 1967 Supreme Court of Canada reference said the federal government has explicit jurisdiction under the constitution, but Premier Bennett and his cabinet have refused to acknowledge the court's opinion.

The issue has lain dormant for a couple of years because the provincial government has not agreed to an Ottawa formula offering a split of offshore development revenues.)

"In areas of shared responsibility offshore, the

FLQ STRENGTH 'EXAGGERATED'

3,000 Armed Rebels in Quebec?

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette describes as "highly exaggerated" what he said was an implication by Jean Marchand that there may have been as many as 3,000 heavily-armed revolutionaries ready to fight for Quebec independence.

"There are maybe 100 or 125 active members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec in my opinion," the Quebec justice minister says in a Quebec City interview with the Star.

Without pinpointing when Mr. Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, made the implication, Mr. Choquette says:

"Mr. Marchand has his own way about him. His statement was highly exaggerated. There were far too many conflicting comments and opinions coming from Ottawa during the crisis."

In the interview, the Quebec minister adds:

"This movement (the FLQ) is not an overnight phenomenon. It has been building momentum for almost a decade, since 1963 . . . We were faced with a decision: Do we let it go by or do we make our stand?"

Mr. Choquette said much of the action by the provincial cabinet was based on what the future might hold, although the actual kidnappings of British envoy James Cross, still sought by police, and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, subsequently murdered, were enough for hard immediate action.

MARCHAND . . . 3,000 set to fight

TWO GIRLS BEHIND BARS DURING BUILDING BLAZE

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Two inmates of a girls' training home were found locked behind bars in basement cells when firemen arrived to extinguish a minor blaze in the wooden building Tuesday night, fire Sgt. Gerald Noseworthy said today.

Four girls escaped during the confusion.

The fire was confined to a second-floor closet containing ventilating equipment. Its cause was not immediately known.

Stephen Neary, minister of social services and rehabilitation, said the two girls had been placed in the basement cells Tuesday "for their own safety and protection."

MPs 'Hurl' Verbal Acid

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs hurled verbal acid in the Commons Tuesday as the House began debate on the second New Democrat motion to set the government's public order bill back to the committee stage in an effort to inject opposition-sponsored changes into the bill.

The volley began as David Lewis (NDP—York South) said the government refused to accept the opposition amendment to the Public Order (Temporary measures) Act, 1970 because it would be admitting that the regulations under the War Measures Act represented "panic-stricken legislation."

"I say you're a phoney," shot back Prime Minister Trudeau.

The prime minister was "an expert to learn from" Mr. Lewis retaliated.

Mr. Trudeau had discarded every progressive idea he ever had. The government had "set out deliberately to create a state of panic" in Canada.

DEBATE GOES ON

Debate continues today on the NDP motion, which seeks to send the bill back to committee-of-the-whole stage from the present debate on third and final reading. The bill moved out of committee stage — clause-by-clause study—Monday.

The motion would have the House reconsider a clause of the bill that allows evidence of support of the Front de Liberation du Quebec prior to the bill taking effect to form presumption of guilt of present support of the FLQ.

The bill would replace regulations under the War Measures Act invoked Oct. 16. It would make membership or support of the aims of the FLQ a crime— as did the regulations—punishable by five years in prison.

Earlier Tuesday, the Commons defeated 113 to 78 an NDP motion to have the committee-of-the-whole reconsider the issue of a review board to oversee the administration of the legislation by Quebec authorities.

In that vote Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes lined up against the Liberal majority.

The watchdog clause was defeated 113 to 78.

Standings in the House now are 153 Liberals, 73 Conservatives, 23 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes, one independent and one vacant for a total of 264.

Opposition amendments to the retroactive clause and on the watchdog issue had already been defeated in committee stage.

ACCUSES TRUDEAU

Mr. Lewis accused Mr. Trudeau of painting the prospect of a massive insurrection when actually only 50 to 100 criminals were involved in terrorist activities—and only because police had been unable to catch them.

Mr. Trudeau then left the chamber and Colin Gibson (L—Hamilton - Went worth) entered the fray, charging the NDP deputy leader with a "sardonic and ill-conceived partisan attack" on the prime minister.

Mr. Gibson said the NDP would have "waved the phoney flag of justice against the barrels of machine-guns" in hte midst of bombings and rioting.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, shouted the Ontario Liberal, was a "damn poor defender of the Canadian nation."

The Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, extends the general powers under the War Measures Act until next April 30, including extraordinary police authority to arrest and detain persons and search and seize property.

Oxfam Aids Victims In Pakistan

Oxfam of Canada announced today it has sent $100,000, three helicopters and a hovercraft to carry relief to victims of the East Pakistan disaster.

Among groups being helped are Brothers of the Holy Cross, Canadian missionaries working in the flooded area. Brother Flavian Laplante of St. Aime, Que., has worked among fishermen there for 20 years, organizing co-operatives and general development.

Brother Laplante acted as chairman of the Emergency Relief Committee set up by the government after the 1960 cyclone. He will organize relief measures for all inhabitants.

Oxfam's field representative, Richard Taylor, is in Chittagong now investigating where help is most urgently needed. Hundreds of thousands in that area, homeless and in danger of starvation, need food, clothing, tents and drugs.

REPLACE BOATS

Oxfam also predicts "there will be a tremendous job to be done in housing, the restoration of agriculture and replacement of fishing boats on which this population depends so heavily — to mention only a few of the more obvious needs."

Victorians are told that "to assist this vital work . . . any gift, however large or small, will be most welcome and tax receipts will be given."

Donations may be sent to Oxfam of Canada, 795 Meaford Ave., Victoria.

B.C. Against Free Trade In Food

An apparent federal government trend toward free trade in agricultural commodities is a major source of concern to British Columbia, according to a brief prepared for the second Canadian Agricultural Congress which opened in Ottawa today.

"British Columbia . . . would be among the first to seek compensation from the federal government on behalf of those industries that would be damaged by free trade policies," the brief states.

It was prepared by the B.C. department of agriculture, the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and the B.C. Farmers' Union.

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford heads a large delegation to the conference which is discussing a federal task force report on agriculture.

The brief states that B.C. is particularly vulnerable to dumping of surplus products by other countries. Horticulture is among the most seriously affected by dumping, it said.

"As a guiding principle we suggest any future increases in food imports should be limited by a small annual percentage based on an average of import quantities of recent years and tied to a percentage of the increase in the markets available . . .

"Any further moves in the direction of free trade should not be made without great care and maximum prior consultation with affected industries."

Resignation Said Final

Deputy Labor Minister William Sands said Tuesday it is "pretty late in the day" for department registrar Ewan Rowntree to have "second thoughts" about his disputed resignation from the department.

"He offered his resignation and I accepted," Sands said, "It's as simple as that."

Sands said the department is already seeking a replacement "and the whole matter is in the hands of the civil service commission."

Rowntree said last week he has not resigned from the position and has "put the entire matter into the hands of my lawyer."

A civil service commission spokesman said the commission was prepared to deal with the case when it comes up. No official notice of grievance had yet been received, he said.

Dentist Drowns

VANCOUVER (CP) — The body of a 43-year-old North Vancouver dentist was found Tuesday washed up on the beach at Lions Bay.

Dr. Ian McLeod was reported missing Sunday afternoon after failing to return from a fishing trip in Howe Sound.

His body and the 14-foot boat he had rented at Horseshoe Bay Sunday morning were found close together on the beach at about noon Tuesday.

An RCMP spokesman said no decision had been made on aninquest.

Parents File Writ

LONDON (AP) — The parents of a convicted murderer hanged in 1962 served a writ on Lord Butler, the home secretary who reviewed the case. Lawyers for Lord Butler, now master of Trinity College, said he would accept the writ. Mr. and Mrs. James Hanratty of London claim damage for "grief and agony" suffered over the hanging of their son, Terry.

VANCOUVER ANGERED BY CAMPBELL THREAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council reacted with anger Tuesday to a threat from Dan Campbell, municipal affairs minister, to cut off a $410,000 tourism grant if the city increases its hotel licence fee.

Council ignored his letter and agreed to prepare a bylaw that will establish a sliding scale of fees for different classes of rooms. The new scale would come into effect Jan. 1, 1971.

Council also agreed to write the minister and disclose its decision and also the reasons behind the move.

Both council and the hotel industry favor an individual room tax but the city lacks power under its charter to levy such a tax.

If the legislature approves a room tax at its next sitting, the licence increases would be scrapped.

Man Without a Country Christian George Hanna, 34, appeared in a Toronto court Tuesday charged with defrauding a tavern of $20. Bail was set at $25 for the man who became a celebrity in 1956 when he arrived in Port Alberni aboard a Norwegian freighter and claimed to have been aboard it for 18 months because he had no passport, hence no country. Canada admitted him but later deported him to Lebanon. Police said he arrived in Canada this time on a Liberian freighter Oct. 27.

Job-Training Subsidy Offered by Gaglardi

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi says he has appealed to industry to help remove young people from British Columbia welfare rolls by providing them with trades training.

His department would be prepared to provide a form of subsidy by paying them welfare for up to 30 days after which time the firm using them would take them on payroll and continue their training.

In an interview Tuesday, Mr. Gaglardi said he has proposed such a program verbally to officials of the Employers' Council of British Columbia and hopes that organized labor will co-operate.

He said his plan is an extension of his earlier efforts to initiate a modified "work-for-welfare" plan in which municipalities would use employable persons on welfare for projects.

OPPOSITION VOICED

But a spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees in Vancouver called the work-for-welfare program "a teardrop in an ocean of misery."

Jack Phillips said after a meeting of four CUPE representatives here Tuesday that the union is opposed to any plan that would compel welfare recipients to work for their benefits.

Mr. Gaglardi, during a recent Social Credit League convention, said welfare recipients who were healthy and able to work would be placed in government jobs, mostly public works projects.

Mr. Phillips did, however, say that CUPE is not opposed to the provision of suitable employment opportunities to welfare recipients provided the established trade union wages and working conditions are adhered to strictly.

He added that regular employees who have been laid off and are available for re-hire must be called back before any welfare recipients are hired and that there must be no layoffs in order to accommodate welfare recipients.

"What we need," said Mr. Phillips, "is a series of bold programs on a national and provincial scale in order to create jobs for hundreds of thousands of Canadians."

STAUB SIGNED

MONTREAL (UPI) — Outfielder Rusty Staub, who led Montreal Expos in virtually every batting department during the past National Baseball League season, has signed his 1971 contract.

Ballard Bid Not Enough For Telecast

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, vice-president of Toronto Maple Leafs, said he attempted to have Tuesday's game between the Leafs and Pittsburgh Penguins televised by offering $10,000 for the television rights, but was turned down.

MacLaren Advertising, which controls the Leafs' broadcasting, said it wasn't enough, Ballard said.

He said he made the offer after learning the game would not be shown on the CTV network. Midweek games are usually played Wednesdays and televised.

MacLaren will have CTV televise the Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks game tonight.

"I knew Channel 11 in Hamilton would be glad to show the game for us," Ballard said. "I don't think we have ever missed a game before. "We'll never sign another contract without the provision in it that all games be shown. The next deal, I don't care who it is with . . . will be for all games, no matter when or what time they're played."

Bennett Upset About Misuse Of Tourist Aid

Premier Bennett said today the cities of Victoria and Vancouver had been using $1 per capita tourist promotion grants from the province for "other purposes" and the provincial government doesn't like it.

In an apparent slap at Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock who said Tuesday the Victoria Visitors Bureau should be scrapped, Bennett said:

"I speak as minister of finance when I say that two years ago we gave the municipalities $1 per capita for tourist promotion and we expect them to use it."

In reply to a question, Bennett said that "on the whole" municipalities weren't using the money for tourism — "they're not in Victoria and Vancouver, anyway."

Asked if he was going to get tough on the issue, Bennett replied, "I don't want to get tough" and then laughed.

He prefaced his remarks with an announcement that tourism had had its best year ever in B.C. with $90 million more in business than the previous highest year, when $375 million was spent by tourists.

"This is what has given B.C. a great lift in a very difficult year. I hope this is realized by all our citizens including the mayors and aldermen," Bennett said.

LONG HAIR LOSES APPEAL

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The University of Texas Athletic Council rejected an appeal this week by Frank Salzhandler, dismissed from the Longhorn swimming team because of long hair.

The council voted 8 to 1 against the appeal. A student member of the group cast the only vote in favor of the former Houston schoolboy swimming star.

Coach Pat Patterson dismissed Salzhandler from the team earlier this year. Patterson said the swimmer was challenging his authority.

Salzhandler contended he was dismissed without reason.

Jerry Believed That Jerry Had Talent to Be No. 1

CALGARY (CP) — When Jerry Williams was coach of Calgary Stampeders, he said second-string quarterback Jerry Keeling had "all you need to be number one."

Williams left two years ago for the National Football League, but Keeling now is number one with the Stampeders as they head for Saturday's Grey Cup game against Montreal Alouettes.

Critics admitted Keeling was one of the greatest defensive halfbacks ever to knock down a pass in the Canadian Football League and he was thought to be an ideal backup man if Peter Liske, the Stampeders quarterback in those days, should be ill or injured. But they openly doubted Keeling's ability to be a first-stringer.

Last Sunday at Regina, when the Stampeders eliminated Saskatchewan Roughriders from the western playoffs with a 15-14 squeaker, it was Keeling at the helm.

Four days earlier, in the second game of the best-of-three playoffs, he had fumbled the ball and Saskatchewan's Ed McQuarters recovered and scored a touchdown. Keeling was miserable.

Sunday, it was a swing pass to Hugh McKinnis from Keeling that put Calgary within field goal distance for the three points that gave them the western championship in the closing seconds of play.

"I thought about it and thought about it," said Keeling in an interview Tuesday. "I felt that if we didn't win on Sunday it was my fault that we didn't get into the Grey Cup, that I'd let the whole team down.

"The biggest problem I had was to get myself to stop worrying about what had happened."

He said he had doubts about the swing pass play "right after it happened."

"Maybe I should have run it and gone for the field goal from there. Even if we'd only gotten a single out of it we would have gone into overtime and I think we could have beaten them.

"I didn't think they would blitz, and they didn't. But I did feel they would be playing far back enough to stop the pass."

The play broke for 16 yards and Larry Robinson dropped the ball between the uprights despite a brisk cross-wind.

The Stampeders were to leave by air today for Toronto to begin practice for the Grey Cup.

Even getting in shape for the game Saturday will not be easy. The Stampeders, as well as being plagued by the after-effects of frostbite from the Regina game where temperatures were near zero, have a few injuries.

Trainer Larry Chace said defensive end Craig Koinzan has a bruised shoulder and a hip injury and a number of other players have assorted bruises and bumps. Wide receiver Uriel Johnson has a knee problem and flanker Gerry Shaw is bothered by a pulled leg muscle.

There also is the spectre of influenza, something that all but flattened the Stampeders just before they met Ottawa Rough Riders and lost the 1968 Grey Cup.

"Just about everybody on the club had something frozen," said Chace, commenting on the Regina game. "After having played under those adverse conditions we have to guard against the flu bug.

"It could become a problem. A lot of the guys now have colds."

AFTER SUICIDE ATTEMPT IN U.S.

Doctor Questioned in Pachena Murder

By STEVE HUME

A Canadian doctor who tried to kill himself In San Francisco, Tuesday was being questioned there today by two RCMP officers investigating the bizarre Pachena Bay murder of Gordon Kralt.

Kralt, 23-year-old caretaker of a deserted Bible camp four miles south of the isolated village of Bamfield on the Island's west coast was found shot to death Sunday. He had last been seen alive Oct. 23.

★ ★ ★

Port Alberni RCMP said this morning two officers had been sent to San Francisco "to talk with" Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, who had been living in an apartment there under the name of Campbell since Nov. 10.

The RCMP sergeant in charge of the Kralt case said no charges had been brought against Stewart, and that RCMP just wanted "to ask him some questions."

U.S. Immigration authorities said Stewart and a woman companion, Maria Trigiani, 31, attempted a double-suicide Tuesday when inspectors Michael Harpold and Harry Hong sought to question them during an investigation to determine whether they were legally in the United States.

Stewart is a Canadian citizen while Trigiani is an Italian national.

Immigration authorities said the couple was found in a gas-filled room after Harpold and Hong knocked at the door.

The inspectors said that when they identified themselves Stewart slammed and barricaded the door.

While trying to force the door the immigration men smelled gas, ran to an outside fire escape and climbed through a window.

They found Stewart and Miss Trigiani lying unconscious on the kitchen floor with the gas stove turned up full, the control handles removed and several empty phials lying on the floor.

The two were taken to San Francisco General Hospital but were reported as being in good condition and improving rapidly today.

The acting district director of U.S. Immigration at San Francisco, Gordon Davidson, said today his department still had not determined whether Stewart was lawfully in the country.

Port Alberni RCMP identified Stewart as a retired doctor who had been "a nomadic type" roaming from port to port on his 35-foot motor vessel Gypsy.

U.S. May Drop All Oil Quotas

OTTAWA (CP) — The hazy outlines of a broad oil-export agreement emerged Tuesday at the close of a joint United States-Canada ministerial conference.

The agreement has the immediate effect of clearing the way for all the crude oil Canada can export to the U.S. in 1971. This would likely mean a 100,000-barrel-a-day increase in piped oil exports from the present daily rate of about 750,000 barrels.

The additional oil exported would be worth about $100 million in a full year.

Officials of both countries then would try to work out an arrangement for future years that would provide "full and unimpeded" access of Canadian crude oil to U.S. markets.

As part of longer-term agreement, Canada would have to maintain a reserve of excess oil to meet any emergency disruption in oil imports from outside North America.

WOULD SERVE EAST

The U.S. would meet any shortage in eastern Canada but those supplies would have to be replaced in the United States by oil from Western Canada.

A future agreement also depends on whether Canada is successful in overcoming U.S. reluctance to lift quotas against Canadian oil imports as long as Eastern Canada is dependent on what some consider uncertain overseas suppliers.

The U.S. has avoided heavy dependence on Canadian imports as long as there was a chance such supplies might be diverted to meet emergencies in Quebec or the Atlantic region.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, head of the Canadian delegation, and Secretary of State William Rogers, head of the U.S. delegation, both expressed confidence that the meeting had been a success

However, there was no indication of agreement on the issues of pollution, Canadian uranium exports or the U.S.-Canada automotive agreement.

REPORTS U.S. STAND

Mr. Sharp told a news conference the Americans had argued Canada should be prepared to give up safeguards contained in the auto pact because of substantial benefits already achieved.

U.S. officials said this would be one method by which Canada could assist the Americans in correcting a troublesome payments deficit.

Mr. Sharp said Canada replied that a current payments surplus now enjoyed in Canada was temporary. He said all safeguards could not be abandoned at once. But certain revisions in the 1965 trade pact might be possible.

Guinea Makes Plea for Aid After Raid by Mercenaries

DAKAR, Senegal (CP) — Guinea announced today that it was invaded again Tuesday night. President Sekour Toure called on "friendly countries" to send all the help they can as quickly as possible.

Radio Conakry, the West African nation's official radio station, referred to new "enemy incursions."

"Thanks to the vigilance of the people," the station said, "the attempts and evil intentions of the Portuguese imperialistic enemy were thrown back by Guinean patriots, the army and the glorious people of Guinea."

Toure has said the invading troops, which first landed on Guinea's shores early Sunday, are mercenaries hired by Portugal and attacking from Portuguese ships. Portugal has denied any involvement.

In Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, the secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity said today that Sudan, Egypt, Nigeria, Libya and Algeria have placed troops on the alert to go to Guinea if needed.

Zambian Vice-President Mainza Chona said in Addis Ababa that an emergency meeting of the OAU council of ministers will be held Dec. 9 to discuss the situation in Guinea.

Chona also appealed to members of the OAU, the non-aligned nations and the "progressive forces of the world" to extend all possible material, financial and military assistance to Guinea to repel the invaders, whom he alleged had the backing of not only Portugal but also "certain NATO powers."

Guerrillas Clash With Jordan Army

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting broke out today between Jordanian army troops and Palestinian Arab guerrillas in northern Jordan.

Palestinians in Beirut, Lebanon, said the army opened fire on a hilltop position with mortars and machine-guns at 7:30 a.m., starting a battle that still was raging at noon.

WON'T OBEY

A Jordanian government source, however, insisted the troops had driven a group of guerrilla "mutineers," who wouldn't obey their commanders, from the village of Thahrat Asfour, on the road between Jerash and Irbid, about 35 miles north of Amman.

"Their control of the village," the informant said, "became a threat to traffic on the main Amman-Jerash-Irbid-Damascus road and the army had to force them out."

FLQ STRENGTH 'EXAGGERATED'

3,000 Armed Rebels in Quebec?

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome-Choquette describes as "highly exaggerated" what he said was an implication by Jean Marchand that there may have been as many as 3,000 heavily-armed revolutionaries ready to fight for Quebec independence.

"There are maybe 100 or 125 active members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec in my opinion," the Quebec justice minister says in a Quebec City interview with the Star.

Without pinpointing when Mr. Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, made the implication, Mr. Choquette says:

"Mr. Marchand has his own way about him. His statement was highly exaggerated. There were far too many conflicting comments and opinions coming from Ottawa during the crisis."

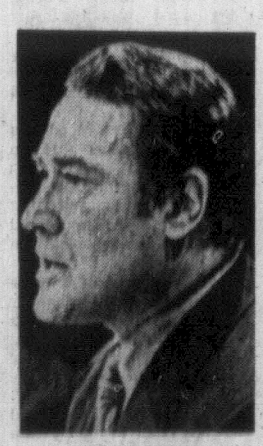

In the interview, the Quebec minister adds:

"This movement (the FLQ) is not an overnight phenomenon. It has been building momentum for almost a decade, since 1963 . . . We were faced with a decision: Do we let it go by or do we make our stand?"

Mr. Choquette said much of the action by the provincial cabinet was based on what the future might hold, although the actual kidnappings of British envoy James Cross, still sought by police, and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, subsequently murdered, were enough for hard immediate action.

Gulf Drilling Bid Slammed

Feasibility Studies Urged by Scientists

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A recommendation from the Science Council of Canada for the immediate launching of a federal-provincial feasibility study on offshore drilling was vigorously attacked today by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

There is "no way" oil drilling will be permitted in the Gulf of Georgia regardless of the findings from such a study, Davis said.

The issue "is 100 per cent decided and even the oil companies are winding up their leases right now," he said when contacted in Winnipeg today.

Jurisdiction Issue Revived

The study recommendation was made in a report sent to Prime Minister Trudeau by Science Council chairman O. M. Solandt which also revived the controversial political question of continental shelf jurisdiction generally.

Davis was successful last spring in stopping B.C. Mines Minster Frank Richter's campaign to promote exploratory drilling by oil companies in the gulf.

There was a hint in the council report's approach that the federal Energy, Mines and Resources department may be giving moral support to the B.C. government to help it go ahead with promoting the oil exploration.

The report's recommendation to cabinet could precipitate the split and test of strength between EMR Minister J. J. Greene and Davis.

Davis is slated to annex Greene's Water Resources Branch when the impending department of environmental affairs and renewable resources is established in a few months.

The Science Council's report, entitled Canada, Science and the Ocean, was released at a press conference here this morning with Dr. J. M. Harrison, Greene's assistant deputy minister in charge of mines and the geo-sciences branch, explaining some of its points.

(His superior is EMR deputy minister Jack Austin, a widely known Vancouver mining executive whose unusual appointment to head the department last May was a storm in the Commons.

(Opposition members said they feared conflict of interest might occur and criticized Prime Minister Trudeau's assurances Austin would sever his commercial connections during the period he is in government service.)

$1 Billion Figure Suggested

Dr. Harrison, a council member, was chairman of a committee on marine matters which drew up the report saying there is "pressing" need for Canada to push offshore gas and oil explorations.

It said expenditure for such explorations could grow to "some $1 billion by 1980" and many times that amount if major discoveries are made.

"Optimal development of our offshore resources will not occur until the various internal and international jurisdictional disputes are settled," it said.

The Science Council "recommends that a concerted effort be made to resolve the jurisdictional difficulties with dispatch" because oil companies might switch attention to other areas of the world where there are no jurisidictional disputes.

(The reference obviously was aimed at the federal-provincial argument over jurisdiction on the continental shelf.)

A 1967 Supreme Court of Canada reference said the federal government has explicit jurisdiction under the constitution, but Premier Bennett and his cabinet have refused to acknowledge the court's opinion.

The issue has lain dormant for a couple of years because the provincial government has not agreed to an Ottawa formula offering a split of offshore development revenues.)

"In areas of shared responsibility offshore, the

DREAM TIME

Warm Memories For a Chilly Day

By Jack Scott

Foul weather does strange things to me and now, driving out to the West Bay Marina at Sidney, the snow still rotting on the hills, more in the offing and the temperature in the low 40s, I felt even stranger than usual.

Just going to look at the Tahitian ketch was ridiculous, in the first place, considering my current bank balance, and I confessed as much to the owner. He didn't seem to mind. Graciously, as all true yachtsmen are on such occasions, he took me below into the snug, compact cabin and we talked awhile about how she handles in open waters.

"If you've done any ocean sailing at all," he said, "you'll appreciate her qualities. On our last run from Oahu . . ."

★ ★ ★

Suddenly my mind had gone back to that winter when, cruising through the South Sea Islands, we had put in briefly to lovely Wanna-Wanna, truly a paradise of the Pacific.

Scott

The curious thing is that we had planned to visit Wanna-Wanna for only a day or two to replenish the provisions aboard our yawl, Jenny May. Little did we dream it would be two months before we were to leave those magic shores.

Wanna-Wanna is a small and crescent-shaped atoll. As we dropped Jenny May's hook into its blue, beautiful Lana Lagoon, the whole of the island's jungle-green length was in our gaze. I remember turning to Schnauzer, my first mate, and saying, "We must stay awhile here."

"Here Time holds one in its cupped hands," Schnauzer said, for he was a poetic sort of chap.

The lovely Lana Lagoon almost defies description. The coral reefs which protect it are as treacherous as any I ever encountered in the South Seas (I had to use all my skill, learned in the copra trade, to sail Jenny May through the single, narrow passage) but, once inside that barrier, it was lake-calm.

Schnauzer and I stood transfixed on the after forepeak, looking in silent awe at the jungle that marched clear down to the azure salt water. A flamingo walked daintily from between two of the giant palms that leaned across the serene face of the lagoon, and waded into the water on his long, stilt-like legs.

Nought broke the silence but the distant tympany of the surf upon the reef, the harsh cry of the white cockatoos flitting about the jungle and the slurping sound of the unicorn fish feeding on the lagoon's glassy surface.

"Truly the enchanted isle," Schnauzer said when he at last found his voice, and we went below to prepare our trinkets for the natives.

It was not merely the magnificence of the setting that caused us to tarry so long in Wanna-Wanna. The natives themselves had somehow been overlooked by the missionaries and were unspoiled, friendly, simple people.

We were particularly impressed with the indescribably beautiful, brown-skinned native maidens who wore only the native grass skirt (or "pui") yet caused us to wonder at their dignity and quiet charm. Sometimes at night, Schnauzer and I would sit on deck under the canopy of stars, listening to their sweet voices and crude ukeleles playing the plaintive Wanna-Wanna song (which may be freely translated, "If You Wanna Me, Then I Wanna You.")

Our every need was looked after by these obliging people. Each day they brought us young, succulent pigs, fruits of all descriptions, coconuts rich with milk (including one type from the southern end of the island which was delightfully alcoholic), exotic fowl of all descriptions and native cigarettes (or "pui") which had the taste of a fine cigar.

The weather was unchangeable. Each day the sun beat down on Jenny May's teak decks, yet the cool breeze from beyond the coral reef provided welcome relief.

Each day we experienced what we called "the afternoon rain." This phenomenon occurred precisely at 2 p.m. (Wanna-Wanna daylight saving time) and lasted exactly 22 minutes, leaving the atmosphere wonderfully refreshed. We took advantage of this period to fill our water casks and to shower.

I remember best those days when, ambition upon us, we ventured into the lagoon by native canoe to fish. Old Ukey-Ukey, our guide, would paddle us out across the sundappled lagoon to the reef. Beneath our slender craft, through the transluscent depths of the water, we would see the shimmering pastel pinks and greens of the living coral.

All manner of strange fish would glide beneath us — the ugly, lemon yellow trigger fish (which the natives call "Humu-humu nukunuku apua'a"), the magnificent parrot fish with its coal black body and brilliant green teeth, the comical surgeonfish (or "pui"), and occasionally a stray, friendly shark.

Schnauzer and I would don our water goggles, take our bamboo spears in hand, slip over the side and swim down into the green, dancing depths for a little sport. Words alone cannot describe the feel of the water in that lagoon. It was, as Schnauzer so aptly put it, like swimming through champagne.

Then back to the Jenny May with our catch for the day. There we would find a fresh supply of coconuts from the southern end of the island, and perchance a bevy of maidens come to giggle in their charming fashion at the strange ways of "the men from across the sea."

We would retire to our cabins to change our loin cloths (for we always dressed for dinner) and on returning to the deck would see the great South Sea moon (or "pui") coming out of the sea . . .

★ ★ ★

"Yes," the owner of the Tahitian ketch at the West Bay Marina was saying, "if you've done any ocean sailing at all you'll appreciate her qualities."

We stood on her deck, shivering, looking up at the bare spars, the rigging rattling in the dismal wintery wind.

"To tell you the truth, I've never sailed anything bigger than a 14-foot dory and never farther than five miles into the Gulf of Georgia," I admitted, "but the rest I know all about."

'Environment 100:' Will 10,000 Sign?

By DON VIPOND

Early in the new year the people behind Environment 100 will hold a "signature blitz."

They hope 10,000 will sign up for a commonsense approach to mothering nature.

The trouble with environment issues is everybody cares, but hardly anybody understands what they are all about. Environment 100 is the name of the project a local group launched in May to correct the situation.

It appears to be a Canadian first and although it's just got rolling, all manner of people are lining up behind it.

And because it's hardly started rolling, it's long on volunteers and work to be done, short on money and space to grow. The next few months will probably settle whether it thrives or dies.

Put It Together

Environment 100 isn't a shrill pack of conservationists, nor is it a glib spokesman for the corporate polluters. What it's going to try and do on regional issues is put it all together — provide a factual information service — so people can be armed with something more than grudges and gossip to make up their own minds how a pollution problem should be tackled.

The idea for an environmental information centre came from the University of Victoria's Biology Club, after it held its big Environment Tomorrow teach-in in the spring.

The public is alerted to the variety of environment threats now, explains Mrs. Betsy Sweeney, one of the new project's workers. What they want now is action.

The centre won't offer opinions on issues. It will supply instead all the objective information it can gather. There is a wealth of material but it needs to be pulled together.

This job is under way in a cluttered office at Uvic's Student Union Building. About 50 volunteers, mostly students, are lending a hand.

Unlikely Allies

Such a rational approach to meeting often-emotional environment issues has already made for some strange bedfellows — the biology club and the Vancouver Island branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada for example.

In the past engineers and biologists have exchanged some harsh words on how much of a threat ocean dumping of sewage represents.

There is a Citizens' Committee for an Environmental Centre and it includes Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen and city manager Dennis Young. These two haven't exactly shared all views on city development problems.

About 100 people were invited to join the citizens' committee and it is mainly their personal contributions which are meeting Environment 100's day-to-day expenses.

The cost of the operation is now running about $500 a month and the organization is solvent until mid-December, says Marc Bell, Uvic biologist and acting chairman of the citizens' committee.

Group Support

Recently B.C. Forest Products Ltd. donated $250, not only a financial boost but another indication of the breadth of appeal the project has developed.

Groups which have offered their endorsement include Saanich and Sidney councils, Victoria's Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Chamber, the Greater Victoria school board, the Victoria Humanist Fellowship, the Vancouver Island branch of the Architectural Institute of Canada and the Capital region of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Bell says 10,000 signatures on a statement supporting the environmental centre concept would be the sort of public support which could lead to financial assistance from governments.

Ideally, he says, the day will come when the centre can be totally independent, perhaps financed through a foundation.

Initial indications are that the objective of 10,000 signatures isn't idealistic. Certainly the volunteers to date have come thick and fast.

When a teacher in a city school last week said she needed three students to come to a meeting dealing with the project, 35 hands went up in the class.

There will be a lot of young people among those collecting the signatures in places like shopping plazas next Jan. 15 and 16. A door-to-door campaign is planned for Jan. 17 to 21.

Meanwhile the centre's library of environmental facts is growing in that cluttered office at the university.

Sue Laubenstein, Mrs. Sweeney and their volunteers are assembling a film directory, a speakers' bureau, a catalogue system for the swelling volume of material, a list of scientific and professional advisers, experts from a variety of fields available to answer specific questions.

Getting Contacts

The centre is establishing contacts with municipal, regional and provincial agencies as well as local groups with environmental interests.

Already four of five people a day are calling or writing or dropping in with their questions or problems.

Bell hopes that a year from now the centre will be in suitable quarters and have the full-time staff it badly needs.

Million Gallon Effort

Greater Victorians have conserved up to one million gallons of water a day in response to attempts to save salmon trying to spawn in Goldstream River.

Water Commissioner Ron Upward told the water board Tuesday that another inch of rainfall in the near future could mean water conserving measures can be relaxed.

Mayor Courtney Haddock called the public response to the board's request to save water "phenomenal."

But the board authorized release of another 50 million gallons to aid the salmon run should the need arise.

●

Upward said the number of coho that have reached spawning grounds is estimated at 1,000; the number of chum is about 5,000.

The average amount of water conserved since the first appeal was made Nov. 6 has been about 500,000 gallons a day, for a total of 10,500,000 gallons.

The Greater Victoria Water District normally consumes between 15 million and 16 million gallons a day.

The board also agreed to send a summary of its actions to federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis who earlier insisted that sufficient water for the salmon run be first priority.

Although the board does not intend to press the matter, its solicitor says the federal Fisheries Act does not take precedence over domestic use of the water.

Haddock said he did not want to prejudice the board's position by releasing legal details, but a summary of the legalities was contained in a letter from Upward to the board.

"The Act does not apply because of a special provincial act, still in force which protects the (water) district. Correspondence from the fisheries department would suggest this to have been their view. The district has operated on this assumption. For the record, the commission has not received any directive, verbal or in writing to release water this year."

Elford Denies Council Arrogant

Mayor Frances Elford today denied accusations made by Conrad Watling, president of the Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association, that Oak Bay council shows "complete disregard for the wishes of the people."

Watling criticized council on Tuesday for passing a bylaw governing the storage of boats, camper bodies and trailers.

He added: "One of the prime things this council has done again and again and again is that if it's not successful the first time, it lets things die down and then redrafts and reintroduces it."

Mrs. Elford said today that Watling is ill-informed.

"I'm rather amazed that these statements are made by somone who never attends a council meeting and, to my knowledge, never avails himself of the minutes or contacts anyone who can give him more accurate information."

Passage of the bylaw, designed to amend one made in 1968 that forbade any of the items from being stored in front of a resident's property, had had a stormy passage.

Two public hearings drew many out to protest.

Why, then, did council persist?

The mayor said today that it was council's intention to ease the restrictions of the 1968 bylaw which was still in effect up until Monday.

BANK THEFT HERO NAGGED BY POLICE

A Saanich man fined $10 today for keeping a horse on his property said he would go to jail rather than pay.

Delmar Crow of 740 Newbury, pleaded guilty. Judge William Ostler asked him to reconsider serving the term and gave him two weeks to pay.

Crow said he was arrested by Saanich police Tuesday, adding he thought this overzealous. He explained he had been trying to sell his house. The horse belongs to his 16-year-old son, who purchased it with his own money.

"It was bought in preference to a motorcycle," said the father.

The Saanich bylaw prohibits keeping a horse on a property less than 1.6 acres. Ostler told Crow that a horse as a pet was "an excellent thing" but "you find yourself in technical difficulty."

It wasn't Crow's first encounter with Saanich police. He was honored by the department and Saanich council earlier this year when he helped catch a bank robber.

Arthur Mayse . . .

THIS MORNING I DIALED my favorite trading post and got a response that caused me to snort and quiver.

"Season's greetings!" said the pleasant female voice at the other end.

What season?

Was she wishing me a happy November?

Nope! In the department stores even though Christmas is still a month distant, T'is the Season to be Jolly.

Bah! Humbug!

Not Christmas itself, you understand. Even grim, old Ebenezer Scrooge changed his mind about that. I'm also aware that it's wise, and sometimes essential, to do your Christmas shopping early. But this jumping of the gun — these premature deckings of the halls of commerce — those overstuffed Santas who make with the big ho-ho-ho before December's so much as launched — are combining to do in the year's finest festival.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus . . . may I be forgiven for dragging his name into print untimely. But what was once an affair of the heart is being replaced by a marathon assault on the pocketbook, and I'm not sure how much longer the Christmas spirit can survive it.

Meanwhile, t'isn't the season to be jolly here. And until it is, this hall will remain determinedly undecked by so much as a sprig of handcrafted holly.

A MAN'S HOME MAY BE his castle, but if it's situated within the Oak Bay borders, he'd better be careful what he parks in the public view. No boats, the municipal council insists, and no trailers.

Unless he can wangle an exemption permit, which might be difficult to obtain, he must henceforth beware of storing 'em beyond the front line of his house.

With this heavy-handed ukase laid on its residents, perhaps Oak Bay might choose to apply further restraints. Here are some suggestions:

Garage doors to be kept closed at all times. (Somebody might be shocked by a glimpse of the utilitarian clutter inside.)

No gardening on Sundays, unless said gardener shields his operation from public view behind a portable screen.

Lawn grass to be maintained at a uniform height, and a per-dandelion fine levied.

This, of course, is nonsense. But so is the Tweedy government's insistence on shoving its outdoors-minded denizens around through the agency of a nuisance bylaw so blatantly intended to placate one element at the expense of another.

EARLIER THIS FALL, I asked for information about Victoria Round Table Club, the name of which appears on a sun dial at the centre of a fine circular rose garden in Beacon Hill Park.

What is this club, I wanted to know, and does it still exist? In asnwer to that last question, the Round Table Club remains active. Its members in fact, will meet this evening at Oak Bay Beach Hotel for six-o'clock dinner and an address by Col. John Nelson, newly-appointed Salvation Army public relations secretary for Canada and Bermuda.

For a reply to the first query — what the club is — I'm indebted to W. T. Straith, a past president and a member for about 40 years.

Victoria Round Table Club began life as a branch of an American parent organization. Presently, though, it settled into a comfortable and independent existence as a local group whose members gather once a month to dine and to hear good speakers.

Eloquent John Oliver, then Liberal premier of British Columbia, was one of the first. Long-term member Straith recalls that Sir Frederick Grant Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, was another distinguished Canadian who addressed the Round Tablers.

The rose garden and sun dial?

"We found ourselves with a little surplus money at one time," he explains. "We turned it over to Herb Warren (Victoria parks chief now retired) and he used it to put in the rose garden. The idea for the sun-dial came from Dr. J. A. Pearce of the observatory. He felt that since all the paths came together, a sun-dial would make a good centrepiece. Dr. Pearce designed it, and we paid for the materials."

The inscribed dial still marks the sunny hours, and though not too many of its original members remain, the Round Table Club is very much alive-o. Membership, well over 50, I'm told, and on the increase.
